Sniper Kills Again; Suspect Arrested

Woman Shot, Escort Slain On Lonely Park Road

Driver Dies Instantly
Killer Lurks at Scene
11 Shells Are Found
Colored Man Seized

BULLETIN.

A light-skinned colored man wearing khaki clothes and a slouch hat was arrested shortly before 3 a. m. today at Wisconsin avenue and Albemarle street by Private D. A. Brown of Eighth Precinct. He was said to be about 35 years old and to answer closely the description of the sniper given by Mrs. Edna L. Brown.

An elderly man was shot to death and his woman companion wounded last night by a colored gunman who poured 11 shots from an automatic pistol into their automobile in Rock Creek Park near East-West highway.

Police believe he was the sniper who killed one man and wounded his woman companion and who shot another man by firing into his automobile without warning last week.

Peter F. Murray, 66, of 7517 Fourteenth street northwest, was shot five times in the back and left side at point blank range.

Mrs. Edna L. Brown, 40, of 1320 Harvard street northwest, was wounded in the hip.

Demanded Money

At Georgetown Hospital, where she was taken by an unidentified motorist more than an hour after she was wounded, Mrs. Brown told Det. Sergt. Robert Barrett, Murray halted his automobile for a stop sign on East-West Highway when a colored man stepped from the roadside, flourishing a pistol. Murray, she said, drove to a secluded road at the gunman's command.

There Murray gave him $6 and, at the bandit's insistence, passed over his wallet containing $10 or $20. The bandit then asked her for money, she said.

"That's not enough," he growled. "Give me your money, too, or I'll blow your brains out."

When Mrs. Brown said she had no money, the robber started shooting.

For an hour after Murray was killed, Mrs. Brown told police, she lay on the road beside the automobile pleading for her life. The man stood over her, she said, brandishing his pistol and threatening to shoot again if she made a sound.

Finally, when an automobile approached along the deserted road, he disappeared into bordering bushes. She said she did not tell occupants of the automobile that the killer lurked nearby because of her fear he might renew his attack.

Find .32 Caliber Shells

She said the man was light-skinned and wore khaki clothing and a slouch hat. Others fired on last week were unable to give any description of their attacker.

Washington and Montgomery County police investigating the murder last night found eleven .32-caliber automatic shells scattered near the automobile in which Murray's body lay slumped over the wheel. In last week's shootings a .32-caliber automatic pistol was used.

James H. Pugh, State's attorney of Montgomery County, revealed he had asked for the blood hounds from Lorton Reformatory to track down the killer. Pugh said he would ask that Lieut. Floyd Truscott and Detective Sergeant Earl Hartman, who led the investigation which broke the Allen B. Wilson murder in 1934, be assigned to the case from Washington.

Mrs. Brown, who is chief sorter for the Ambassador Laundry, told police she and Murray were on their way to a dance at Silver Spring, Md. She said she and Murray had known each other about four years. She is a widow, he a widower.

Murray was a deputy foreman for the WPA and had lived in Washington about five years, coming here from Philadelphia, where

Links Great Nations

By Sidney Olson.

The world's greatest merchant nations were linked yesterday in two reciprocal trade agreements designed to achieve a stable world peace structure through free trade.

A trade agreement between the United States and Great Britain, 19th in the series negotiated by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and a renewed and revised Canadian agreement, were signed at the White House at 4 p. m. by President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull, Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada.

Effects Far-Reaching

The significance of the historic agreements, binding the world's greatest democracies closer in the face of the totalitarian threat in Europe, is expected to extend far beyond the immediate benefits of the agreements themselves, enormous as those will be.

The agreements go into effect January 1, 1939, for an initial period of three years, and may continue in force indefinitely thereafter, subject to termination by any of the governments concerned on six-months notice.

Under the "most-favored-nation" principle, all concessions granted by the United States to Britain and Canada will go to all other countries except Germany, which is on this country's "blacklist" because of discrimination against American trade. British and Canadian concessions extend to all other countries outside the British Empire.

The British agreement applies not only to American trade with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland but also to Newfoundland and other non-self-governing British colonies.

The agreement does not apply to Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, Eire, India, Burma or Southern Rhodesia.

The agreement with Canada covers a broader field than in 1935 and effects still further duty reductions from that signed in 1935.

$675,000,000 Involved

The scope of the agreement can be determined by the fact that trade between the United States and the United Kingdom and colonies now constitutes one-fifth of American trade with the world as a whole. The State Department noted:

"The United Kingdom is in most years the largest market for our exports and ranks among the three leading countries as a source of our imports."

The commodities concerned in the British agreement represented in

A mass descent upon the White House and a fresh batch of resolutions and letters yesterday comprised a colorful overture to today's "crucial" action in the Jefferson Memorial-cherry tree controversy—President Roosevelt's announcement of his stand.

While National Capital Parks workmen continued to remove cherry trees south of the Tidal Basin preparatory to transplanting them, the following shots were ringing out along the woodman-spare-that-tree front:

Two score Washington clubwomen marched down to the White House to tell the President, through Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre, they prefer West Potomac Park as it is, that its Japanese cherry trees should not be removed to make way for a frigid memorial of marble.

The Washington Board of Trade renewed its protest against the project, a special committee depositing a resolution and a letter signed by Lawrence E. Williams, acting president, at the White House.

The Warring gang's own ledgers—which showed how more than $4,000,000 of Washington money flowed through "their bribe-protected racket" in two and a half years—yesterday were bared to the District Court jury trying the three brothers and their two income tax experts for conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Nearly a million and a quarter of those dollars went into the pockets of the underworld. Only about two and a half million went back to the bettors, who took 600 to one on 1,000 to one hazards. Some $30,000 was paid in bribes to officers of the law, the Government witnesses say the Warrings told them.

Taciturnly watching as District Attorney Pine and Assistant District Attorney Wilson meshed the Government's evidence was a courtroom crowd dotted with "writers," "runners" and other hangers-on of the numbers racket.

The spectators—many of whom were spotted by officials well acquainted in criminal circles—appeared to shun Justice Laws' courtroom the first two days of the trial.

Airport Work Starts Tomorrow; Agencies Provide $9,000,000

President Roosevelt is expected to inaugurate work tomorrow on the new Gravelly Point airport to be built with $6,300,000 earmarked yesterday by the Public Works Administration and approximately $2,700,000 to be allocated within the next few days by the Works Progress Administration.

About $1,000,000 above the original construction estimates has been made available, Civil Aeronautics officials said, to insure speed in building the terminal which must be "substantially completed" by June 30, 1940.

Although the Army engineers are scheduled to direct the early dredging operations about to get under way, an engineering committee, to be appointed Monday, will have general supervision of the airport development for the Civil Aeronautics Authority, it was revealed yesterday.

In making its announcement the Public Works Administration said the allocation of funds "ends a 12-year deadlock over a new and suit-

Jews Are Threatened

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 17.—Jews lived in dire suspense today as the Nazis solemnly buried as a martyr the young diplomat whose assassination occasioned the latest outburst of anti-Semitism.

The government withheld further restrictive decrees that Jews had expected after the services for Ernst vom Rath, fatally wounded by a Jewish youth, Herschel Grynszpan, in the German Embassy in Paris last week. Vom Rath was third secretary of the embassy.

But two officials in funeral orations for Vom Rath in Dusseldorf warned that "we understand the challenge (of Jewry) and accept it," and "no measure of terror can bring Germany back to slavery." Reichsfuehrer Hitler attended the services, but delivered no address.

Hitler arrived in Dusseldorf shortly before the funeral and left almost immediately after the services. Silent crowds, omitting their usual "heils," lined his route to the hall. He spoke words of sympathy to Vom Rath's parents and two brothers and, stern-faced, solemnly stood in salute before the floodlighted coffin.

Attache Called Home

By Robert C. Albright.

United States participation in mass transplantation of German Jews in a new land and possible relaxation of filled German and Austrian immigration quotas were under study here yesterday in State, Labor and Congressional quarters.

Bitter condemnation of German persecution of both Jews and Catholics continued at the Capital, and the Commerce Department ordered back to Washington its Berlin attache, Douglas Miller.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce Patterson called Miller's return a "routine visit," arranged two months ago, but observers saw significance in its close proximity to similar State Department instructions to Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson, now on his way home.

Questioned on proposals to "mortgage" German immigration quotas for the next three years to permit immediate entry of 81,000 refugee Jews, Secretary of Labor Perkins said it would take an act of Congress and official opinion "hasn't crystallized."

"It is under study in many quarters," said the Labor Secretary, "but any change in the immigration laws must be cautiously approached. We want to be sure we are doing the Shanghai (Friday), Nov. 18 (U.P.).—The Japanese today were rushing heavy reinforcements to Canton to oppose more than 100,000 counter-attacking Chinese soldiers who had fought their way into the environs of the great South China metropolis.

Japanese admitted the situation was serious and that thinly held Japanese positions in the Canton area had been captured by the Chinese forces composed of well-trained regular army units from Kwangsi Province.

Foreign military attaches believed the offensive might enable Chinese Gen. Chiang to hold his Yengyang triangle defense area in Hunan Province for an indefinite period.

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—Sheriff E. S. Adrian, of Loudoun County, said today John Anderson, 27-year-old colored man from Purcellville, had been arrested and placed in the Arlington Jail in connection with a criminal attack on a young white married woman near Hamilton, Va.

The sheriff said the woman, mother of a 4-months old baby, was attacked Tuesday afternoon while her husband, a farmer, was in the fields.

The prisoner was arrested at Purcellville and Sheriff Adrian said he was positively identified by persons who saw him on the day of the attack.

More than 26,000 residents of Washington and nearby yesterday pledged $229,301.85 to the Community Chest as volunteer workers reported 58.06 per cent of this year's campaign for $2,127,000 had been obtained in the first six days of the drive.

Herbert L. Willett, chest director, said average contributions were continuing larger than last year, pointing out that 95,967 persons had pledged $1,235,018.48, according to the report presented at yesterday's meeting of volunteers. William J. Flather, jr., general chairman, announced the campaign would be continued an extra day, and the final report meeting held at noon, Wednesday, in the Willard Hotel ballroom.

Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters and mayor of Louisville at the time of the flood, told the 800 volunteers that the Community Chest and American way of handling relief deserved high praise for their records during the "dark days of January, 1937."

"We came out of that experience with greater appreciation of the American community and the fiber that holds it together," Miller declared. "A large part of the happy results we experienced were due to the fact that the Community Chest agencies had been going on year in and year out doing their work."

Miller recalled that after floods the Community Chest organizations in both Louisville, Ky., and Providence, R. I., exceeded their relief

Only 21 Guns Welcome Girl, Born to Egypt's Young Rulers

By the Associated Press.

Alexandria, Egypt, Nov. 17.—The birth of a daughter to the young King and Queen of Egypt sent a wave of rejoicing over Egypt tonight.

The baby was named Ferial.

Artillery salutes in the principal cities were restricted to 21 guns, instead of the 101 that would have been fired for a boy who would have been heir to the throne.

Prince Mohamed Aly, Farouk's elderly cousin, continues to be heir apparent. Farouk and the former Farida Zulficar were married last January 20.

The word of the birth was flashed 1,500 miles down the Nile to Khartoum and to other cities and villages. In all cities the news was a signal for starting lavish distribution of food and clothing to the poor.

The baby was born in Montaza Palace where Queen Farida was attended by an obstetrician who attended her own birth 17 years ago.

CIO to Boycott Ford Unless He Meets Demand

Want Recognition
Roosevelt Lauded
Conclave Ends Today

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 17.—The Congress of Industrial Organizations hurled a threat of boycott today by its claimed membership of 3,790,000 against the Ford Motor Co. unless that concern agrees to "bargain collectively" with the United Automobile Workers Union.

The sudden action was a climax to an exciting day in which the 500 delegates mapped a broad social security program, stood and cheered approval of a resolution requesting an exhibit of their unity, and indorsed the "humanitarian and social program" of President Roosevelt.

Early in the day a delegate, George Bucher, of Philadelphia, had endeavored unsuccessfully to have the rules suspended to enable consideration of a resolution placing the convention in favor of a third term for President Roosevelt. At the request of Lee Pressman, general counsel of the C. I. O., the request was withdrawn.

Marked by Fiery Speeches

Fiery speeches by Van A. Bittner, regional director of the the C. I. O., and district president of the United Mine Workers; Richard Frankensteen, vice president of the auto workers, and others, preceded action on the Ford resolution.

Bittner said:

"He will either manufacture cars with an agreement with auto workers or he will not sell any cars in America."

The veteran labor leader asserted he was speaking in behalf of 102,000 organized coal miners in West Virginia and scores of thousands of steel and packing house workers in Chicago.

"We will notify every Ford dealer we are not going to buy any Ford cars until Ford signs a contract with the U. A. W."

The resolution charged the Ford management with exercising every means of destroying all semblance of bona fide labor organization within its plants, was an "unfair competitor" with other manufacturers who have signed union agreements, and:

"That in event the Ford Motor Co. persists in its refusal to bargain collectively with the U. A. W. of A., the delegates assembled on behalf of their unions will treat Ford products as unfair, and will so advise their respective unions."

Ford Official Replies

In Detroit Harry Bennett, personnel director for Ford, asserted the U. A. W. A. was "not representative in Ford plants" and that "we'll iron out difficulties" with the union "wherever they are representative."

"But they'll have to show us first they have the right to speak for our workers," added Bennett, saying the company never refused to bargain collectively with anybody.

The C. I. O.'s support of the automobile workers came in the wake of a demonstration of loyalty to the C. I. O. by the U. A. W. A. delegation.

Gold watches were presented on the speakers' platform to Chairman John J. Lewis; Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, vice chairman, and Executive Director John Brophy, as "tokens of appreciation" of their leadership.

Murray responded:

"These tokens are representative of the kind of co-operative unity prevailing between the United Automobile Workers and the C. I. O."

On the question of unity, the newly created congress charged newspapers with misrepresenting the "purpose of ordinary debate, twisted meanings and distorted headlines" in striving "to portray and actually to create splits among forces of the C. I. O."

"Therefore, in order to show the complete lack of basis for the representation in the press, be it resolved that we here demonstrate by rising vote the forces of the C. I. O. are solidly united."

Morris Watson, vice president of the American Newspaper Guild, read the resolution.

Delegates stood, some cheering.

Heywood Broun, president of the guild, said:

"As one newspaper man to others, I want to say the C. I. O. is a united movement."

The delegates adopted resolutions on social security, which Harvey Fremming, chairman of the committee on social security, asserted meant a "tremendous expansion of the program put into effect under President Roosevelt."

The resolutions established a permanent committee on social security, indorsed adequate care for the aged, needy, blind and widows, approved the President's national health committee's activities and ordered a survey of the health co-operative field.

Swing to Third Party Seen as Unlikely
Voters Appear to Favor 2-Party System

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Nov. 17.—The efforts of New York's Mayor LaGuardia and other liberals toward forming a national third party in politics come at a time when the public is not particularly receptive to the third party idea.

GALLUP.

The mayor is planning a series of conferences with other like-minded progressives, as he calls them, and word comes from Wisconsin that the La Follette brothers are undaunted in their efforts to shape a National Progressive Party.

But there is abundant evidence from the public opinion surveys of the Institute that such third party movements have relatively little chance of success at the present time. As "balance of power" parties which, in a close election, might cast the deciding vote for a candidate of one of the major parties, they may achieve political importance. But it is unlikely that any wide popular swing toward a third party will take place in the near future.

The Institute's studies show that the voting population is on the whole, satisfied with the two-party system and believes that the present major parties are more adequate vehicles for the expression of the popular will than anything yet proposed.

The latest of these studies asked voters throughout the Nation whether they thought the time had come to give up the present Republican and Democratic parties and have two new ones—one for conservatives, the other for liberals. The vote was 70 per cent "no," 30 per cent "yes."

This vote, which would indicate that no majority dissatisfaction exists with the present party labels, is not surprising in view of the fact that Institute studies show more difference between Republican and Democratic party sentiment today than has probably existed in many years. The difference lies in the fact that the two parties are today serving as vehicles of expression for widely divergent income groups.

The Institute's studies show, for example, that the lower-income voters, particularly in the North, now look upon the Democratic party as their vehicle for political expression, while the upper income groups fall in with the Republican party. This was true in 1936 and is true today.

| | Voters for Roosevelt 1936 | Today |
|---|---|---|
| Upper Income Group | 42% | 28% |
| Middle Income Group | 59 | 49 |
| Lower Income Group | 76 | 73 |

So long as the two parties continue to appeal to widely divergent groups of voters and express divergent points of view, the prospects for a third party are not bright. If the two major parties were to draw together in their viewpoint and philosophy so as to become almost indistinguishable, then it is possible that a third party with a wholly different point of view might successfully grow.

The La Follette brothers believe, according to reliable sources, that both major parties will fail to improve business conditions and that, according to Raymond Clapper, "the Democratic party is now bent upon competing with the Republicans as the conservative party."

For these reasons they have hopes of success for their National Progressive Party.

When this organization was launched early in the year, the Institute conducted a survey to test its popular strength. Only about one person in 11 who had heard of the movement showed a desire to join it—a reliable indication that no great dissatisfaction existed with the present two-party system.

But the Institute study also showed that the National Progressive Party drew many more voters from the Democrats than from the Republicans. The same was true of Huey Long's old Share-the-Wealth Party which, according to Institute surveys at the time, drew twice as heavily from the Democrats as from the G. O. P. It is likely that any third party movement if successfully launched would be a threat chiefly to the Democrats.

Lesson Given FCC in Use Of 'Profanity'

N. B. C. Officer Explains
Royal Accepts Blame
Questioned on Policy

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday was given a lesson in what is and what is not profanity, by John F. Royal, vice president of the National Broadcasting Co. in charge of programs.

Appearing at the chain-monopoly inquiry, Royal explained that the use of such expressions as "My God!" "hell," etc., in a recent broadcast of Eugene O'Neill's "Beyond the Horizon" were not used as profanity.

A number of N. B. C. network stations were cited for hearings recently because of a complaint against the expressions in a radio version of the 1920 Pulitzer Prize play. F. C. C quickly reversed its action, however, and canceled the hearing when newspapers branded the move as censorship.

Accepting full responsibility for the program, Royal said that he did not believe the lines complained of were profane.

Character Religious

"We did not feel that the name of the Lord was being used in vain," he said, "because the character who used it was a deeply religious man, and we do not think he would have used it that way, just as a minister would not."

Royal said that N. B. C.'s program services entail an annual expenditure of $100,000,000. Sustaining programs alone, he said, cost the network $5,000,000 a year exclusive of overhead expenses. He estimated that N. B. C. sponsors spend $15,000,000 a year on radio programs.

Asked by George Porter, assistant FCC counsel, whether he believed that N. B. C. should maintain its policy of signing artists to exclusive contracts, Royal said he did.

"You wouldn't expect to have Babe Ruth playing for the Yankees one day and the Giants the next," he said, "and I wouldn't want Charlie McCarthy on N. B. C. one night and on Columbia or Mutual the next."

Questioned about N. B. C. policy on children's programs, Royal said the network officials exercised their "best judgment."

"Radio musn't be blamed for all excitable children," he said, "or adults."

Royal said that N. B. C. in its commercial contracts carries a clause which requires sponsors to give equal time to opposite points of view whenever they introduce a controversial subject of public interest on their programs.

West Point, Ga., Nov. 17 (AP).—Senator Walter F. George, whose opposition to certain New Deal measures caused President Roosevelt to seek his defeat in the Georgia Democratic primary, was on record today with a demand that the Government cease "deficit financing" and curb its "regimentation of business."

Addressing a civic group, the Georgia Senator declared "economic despotism cannot long be maintained by the Government without also the imposition of a social and political despotism," and suggested the Government should "admit its mistake and failure, and endeavor to rectify matters before it is too late."

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 17 (AP).—Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, veteran liberal, said here today the liberals got a setback in last week's election and "we probably deserved it."

"We got a jolt," Norris told interviewers. "I don't think it was a bad thing. . . . It will make us stop, consider and listen."

Senator-elect James M. Mead (Democrat), New York, suggested yesterday that the Administration resubmit its Government reorganization program with a proviso that Congress could invalidate any merger order issued by the President.

Mead, whom President Roosevelt supported for the seat of the late Senator Royal Copeland, was one of those sponsoring reorganization legislation in the House last spring. That chamber shelved the entire program.

"On the basis of complaints of inefficiency in Government registered by the Republicans in the last campaign," Mead said, "they should join with us in making the Executive department of the Government effective in its operation."

Caution Urged in Business Forecasts

By the Associated Press.

A prominent Federal economist injected a note of caution yesterday into the optimistic business forecasts for next year.

Asking that his name not be used, he said he and a number of other statisticians in and out of the Government expected a slight and temporary industrial downturn in the first quarter of 1939, followed by a resumption of recovery in the second quarter.

His opinion contrasted with a statement of Secretary of Commerce Roper Wednesday that "the fundamentals of business are in a more encouraging condition than they have been for a long time."

The economist estimated that industrial production, as measured by the Federal Reserve Board index, is now back to 100 per cent of the 1923-25 averages averages—up 24 points from the 1938 low of 76 in May, 12 points higher than a year ago, and higher than at any time since the 102 mark of October, 1937. He said the country's limited consumption power would put a brake on the recent rapid rise in production.

TVA Witness Holds Rate Rise Necessary

Sees 43% Increase
Return Not Enough
Says Costs Not Covered

By the Associated Press.

Edward L. Moreland, dean of engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, told the TVA investigating committee yesterday that TVA rates must be increased 43 per cent to assure taxpayers the return of their eventual investment in the public power project.

He appeared before the Congressional investigating committee as a representative of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation.

Even if all available power were sold from the Tennessee Valley Authority's 11 existing or contemplated dams, Moreland said, income at present rates would fall $10,352,000 short of "out-of-pocket" cost annually. He based this estimate on his own allocation of TVA power production costs, an interest charge of 3½ per cent on this investment, and depreciation charges which he said were justified by his general experience.

Francis Biddle, committee counsel, disputed portions of Moreland's testimony and drew from him an admission that, if interest and depreciation combined were figured at nine-tenths of one per cent less than Moreland's allowance, present TVA rates "will produce a profit by your own figures."

John Paul Jones' Plan for Pistol Range Scuttled

John Paul Jones (no relation) lost a minor engagement yesterday—and the Navy was not involved.

Jones, an attorney here, had requested Police Superintendent Brown for permission to establish a pistol range on property adjoining the Seventh Precinct, 3218 Volta place northwest.

Jones and many businessmen in Georgetown were in favor of the pistol range as were many police officials.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal sank Jones' proposition. He informed the District Commissioners they could not allow Jones or anyone else to establish a pistol range on police property without first receiving approval from Congress.

Wallace and Aide Ask South to Back Farm Program

Led by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Agriculture Adjustment chieftains yesterday launched a campaign in the deep South to win back support for the Administration's farm program in a marketing quota referendum December 10.

At Macon, Ga., Wallace urged farmers to "stick with the national farm program" and warned that "hard-won solidarity with the farmers of the West is in danger."

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Brown in Nashville, Tenn., likewise warned that vigorous efforts will be made next session to substitute a new bill or drastically amend the farm act. Brown told farmers that "unless they are watchful, they can very easily lose in a very short time all, or most of what they have gained."

French Labor Votes Fight on Daladier's Rule

Hits Economic Decrees
Demonstration Nov. 26
5,000,000 May Strike

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 17.—The General Confederation of Labor, powerful organization of 5,000,000 workers, voted tonight to fight Premier Daladier's economic decree laws, planning a day of national demonstration for November 26 and threatening a nation-wide strike.

Workers' delegates voted unanimous opposition to Daladier's "three year plan" for rebuilding French finances as issues developed over possible dissolution of parliament and French negotiations for a war renunciation agreement with Germany.

[President Lebrun tonight shattered the tradition which requires him to remain aloof from parliamentary tangles by making a nation-wide radio appeal for support of Premier Daladier's "three-year plan" of economic reform, the United Press said. The President joined Daladier and Finance Minister, Paul Reynaud in the radio appeals.

[Daladier summoned his cabinet into session for tomorrow to determine whether the ministers are agreed to push through the decrees to the last letter, whatever the opposition.—Editor's note.]

Deputies said the premier was planning to dissolve the Chamber of Deputies and rule France for a time without Parliament if it refuses to ratify the economic program against which the confederation had set itself.

Both Socialist and Communists assailed French "silence" on German anti-Semitism and demanded detailed information on negotiations for a treaty with Germany which Daladier told a Radical-Socialist executive committee yesterday were nearing completion.

A statement authorized by the Communist Party political bureau said the government's silence was noted with "shame and humiliation" while President Roosevelt 'stigmatizes before the world the demand of German racists."

Police broke up a demonstration by about 2,000 persons in Place d'Italie, in the heart of the French workers' district, against the premier's decree laws.

It was the first demonstration they had provoked and police said most of the demonstrators were Communists.

She was heckled continuously. "Oh yeah's," were heard on all sides and there was one burst of downright jeers from the audience of 200 which judged the debate and gave her nine votes.

addressed a letter to the President urging him to intervene.

Abandonment of plans to erect the monument on the disputed site and the holding of a competition among architects and sculptors for the memorial's design and statue were recommended by the National Competitions Committee in still another letter to President Roosevelt.

H. S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, last night told his organization he had learned "from an unimpeachable source" that erection of the Jefferson Memorial is only the first step in marked reduction of the Tidal Basin area. He said he knew plans already were made to eliminate the north end of the basin for extension of Independence avenue.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission, which approved plans for the memorial last September at a joint meeting, will meet together again today, but neither has the power to halt the project.

Gilmore D. Clarke, chairman of the latter body, loudly protested the design by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission but when Congress, last June, voted $500,000 to start work on the monument to Jefferson his remonstrances ceased.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the planning body and uncle of the President, is expected to address the joint meeting today on the confused status of the memorial enterprise.

Yesterday he pointed out that construction, grading and landscaping will make a "general mess" of the Tidal Basin area for two or three years.

However, the West Potomac Park site was one of four which the planning group informed the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission were acceptable for the memorial. The other three were Lincoln Park, the foot of East Capitol street and the south side of the Mall, opposite the Archives Building.

Delano's opposition to the present scheme, considered in conjunction with the fact that President Roosevelt asked him to prepare and submit a detailed report on the question, led many to believe that the President today will at least order the ground-breaking postponed.

Bids for the excavation contracts are scheduled to be opened Monday.

The clubwomen's descent upon the White House followed a meeting at Dupont circle, presided over by Mrs. H. C. Oberholser, State vice regent of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations; Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, director of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

"The Washington Board of Trade joins with the citizens of Washington and the Nation at large in respectfully requesting that the present plans for the construction of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial be laid aside," the acting president of the board said in his letter.

"This organization has, for 50 years, co-operated toward the beautification of Washington and we trust that some other site will be selected for the construction of a suitable memorial and that nothing will be done to destroy the natural beauty and the cherry trees in the Tidal Basin area."

A.M.A. Subpena Partly Quashed By Court Here

Proctor Exempts Data
But Other Part Stands
Must Show Records

Range of the Justice Department's grand jury investigation into allegedly monopolistic activities of the American Medical Association was sharply narrowed yesterday when District Court Justice Proctor quashed two-thirds of a subpena to compel the A. M. A. to produce a mass of records covering 22 years and scattered over nine stories in their Chicago headquarters.

Justice Proctor exempted from the investigation material dealing with A. M. A. relations with ten different group medicine organizations in all parts of the country, terming the demand for these records "an unreasonable and oppressive burden."

He allowed the subpena's third paragraph to stand, however, ruling that the records involved are sufficiently well defined and pertinent to the investigation to justify the demand that the A. M. A. place them before the grand jury.

The third section of the subpena orders the A. M. A. to produce all correspondence, memoranda or other documents, dating from January 1, 1932 relating to:

The Justice Department's investigation of relations of the A. M. A. and District Medical Society with the Group Health Association, of Washington.

Any requirement or proposal of the A. M. A. that hospital staff members belong to local branches of the A. M. A.

Instances where approval of hospitals for intern training by the A. M. A. was revoked because of the membership of the staffs of such hospitals.

Counsel for the A. M. A. had contended that terms of the original subpena exceeded the authority of the grand jury. Justice Proctor acknowledged that certain privileged communications were affected by the subpena, even as modified by his order, but said he would "omit dealing with the question now in view of counsel's assurance that they apprehend no trouble in amicably settling any questions of that kind that may arise."

able airport for the Nation's Capital." The Public Works Administration allotment provides for the establishment of an aeronautical landing area, including the acquisition of certain privately owned lands within the site, for the construction of hangars, administrative buildings and offices for the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The main office for the CAA will be built on high ground above the site of the landing field. The structure will have a large central section and two setback wings. It will conform with the architectural plans of the airport administration building and the two lines of hangars to be built between the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard and the field itself.

Used for Filling, Dredging

About $2,300,000 was allocated by the PWA from appropriations made by Congress prior to the beginning of the current fiscal year. Since it is not subject to the restriction requiring expenditure outside of the District, this money will be used for filling and dredging.

The remaining $4,000,000, which is subject to the limitation against expenditure within the District, will be used for cutting down a hill on the edge of the proposed airport, for dry fill and for construction of the terminal buildings, all of which will be located in Virginia.

1 to 5 Year Credit to Industry Urged

Houston, Tex., Nov. 17 (AP).—Intermediate credit to industry was urged tonight by E. N. Dekker, Cleveland banker, in an address before the final divisional session of the American Bankers Association convention.

He explained his conception of intermediate credit was credit advanced for a period of one year to five years, a field commercial banks have barely tapped. Dekker said loans of this type would do much to lift American business from the doldrums.

Before adjournment the bankers adpoted resolutions calling for balancing the national budget and elimination of overlapping taxes by the State, Federal and municipal governments.

Educators Score Nazi Persecutions

One Sees 'Germs' in U.S. Points to Jersey City Notables Make Plea

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 17.—A plea for Americans to stamp out "any germs of intolerance" in this country was linked tonight with growing protests against Germany's anti-Jewish campaign.

One of a group of educators participating in a Nation-wide radio protest program, Dr. Alan Valentine, president of the University of Rochester, declared "some intolerance exists in America and is increasing when an American says—'I can sympathize with Germany's treatment of the Jews.'"

"From such little beginnings are men like Goebbels and Streicher lifted to power," he said. "In Jersey City, they are only one step from denying free speech to anyone they happen to disagree with."

Other Speakers on Program

Other speakers on the program included Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University; Charles B. Glenn, superintendent of schools of San Francisco; Dr. George Johnson, secretary general of the National Catholic Education Association; Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. J. K. Pettingill, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

While the leaders were voicing their protests on the air, another group of educators issued similar statements denouncing what they termed German "horrors." In this group were six university presidents—Dr. Wilbur, Dr. James B. Conant, of Harvard; Dr. C. A. Dykstra, of Wisconsin; Dr. F. P. Graham, of North Carolina; Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, of Chicago, and Dr. Charles Seymour, of Yale—and Prof. John Dewey, of Columbia; Dr. Alvin Johnson, president of the New School for Social Research; Dr. Edward A. Ross, professor emeritus of Wisconsin, and Dr. Charles A. Beard, historian.

The faculty council of City College of New York's College of Liberal Arts and Science, meanwhile, adopted a resolution "strongly condemning the German government for its policy of persecution" of Catholics, Protestants and Jews and urging the United States Government to extend "all possible aid" to the victims.

8 Governors Protest

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Eight Governors lined up tonight among the protesters of Germany's anti-Semitic drive in urging the citizens of their States to join the Nation-wide "day of prayer" this week-end.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America listed the Governors as Albert B. Chandler of Kentucky, Leslie Jensen of South Dakota, Fred P. Cone of Florida, Harry W. Nice of Maryland, Clyde Tingley of New Mexico, Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri, Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut and Lewis O. Barrows of Maine.

Peace Group Hits Civilian Bombings

Nazis Warn Catholics 'To Curb Priests' Talks'

Vienna, Nov. 17 (AP).—Nazi authorities have "advised" provincial heads of Catholic orders to exercise some control over the pulpit utterances of plainspoken priests.

The authorities denied that the action constituted censorship. DNG, German official news agency, announced it was the result of the initiative of the provincial church leaders themselves.

U.S. Studies Relaxing of Quotas On Immigrants From Germany

Immigrant

right thing and something that will receive the co-operation of the American people."

Miss Perkins said she is withholding her own view pending study. She said both German and Austrian immigration quotas are now filled in advance for approximately a year and a half.

An independent effort in Congress to call up the Dickstein bill, permitting reallocation of unused quotas to countries with over-quota visa applications was regarded as certain.

Senator King, of Utah, second ranking Democrat on the Senate Immigration committee, indorsed the so-called Kennedy plan, under which Great Britain would provide land in her colonies and the United States would aid in financing resettlement.

"Amendment of the immigration laws would provide only piece-meal solution of the problem," said King. "I believe we could work out a plan to transplant the entire German Jewish population with new hope in a new land. The United States must pay her share of the financial burden. There is precedent for appropriating money from the Federal Treasury to aid a terribly oppressed race."

King said he feared relaxation of the immigration laws might aggravate the unemployment problem and meet labor opposition.

"Our problem is not to dilute or modify the fine sentiment for the Jewish race now manifest throughout the country by mass immigrations that might jeopardize jobs," he said.

Commissioner of Immigration James L. Houghteling said immigration quotas are full not only for Germany and Austria, but for Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and Rumania as well. He said the President had authority to merge the quotas of merged countries like Germany and Austria, but could not even by proclamation increase the number of any one quota.

Houghteling pointed to immigration law requirements for economic independence of immigrants and said the last would be "a hurdle for a race denied the right to take anything out of the country with them."

He said he has not been asked to recommend any changes in the law.

The annual German-Austrian immigration quota is 27,370, prorated among the months. Some 220,000 applications for German visas were reported on file. Secretary Perkins said that in previous years the quota has never been filled.

Houghteling said there was no way of estimating the percentage of Hebrew immigration as against the quota total, as the law does not require designation of race. He said in the last fiscal year 11,119 German immigrants registered as Jews, 6,243 of whom entered in the last six months.

Miller, commercial attache at the United States Embassy in Berlin, was instructed to report in Washington not later than January 1. He is expected to leave with his family in mid-December abroad the S. S. Manhattan. His assistant, Robert M. Stephenson, was authorized to carry on his duties.

Observers interpreted his return to virtual abandonment for the time being of any effort to work out a trade understanding with Germany. It appeared doubtful that Miller would return to his post. In Berlin it was reported that Miller sought a leave of absence three months ago, but at that time the Commerce Department considered his presence there indispensable.

Republicans joined Democrats in commending President Roosevelt's stand against German excesses, and Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, called Ambassador Wilson's return an unofficial diplomatic break.

"I think Wilson just won't go back," said Connally.

Senator Capper, (Republican), of Kansas, said the President "expressed the sentiment of civilized people all over the civilized world," and Senator Schwellenbach asserted this Government's "right to express its opinion concerning the failure of any nation to afford to its minorities that protection which civilized justice demands of them."

Chairman Dies, of the House un-American committee, said if diplomatic relations are broken the same action should be taken with Russia for "liquidating its own citizens and committing mass murders."

Nuremberg, Germany, Nov. 17 (AP).—The first penalty for looting of a Jewish home since the start of Germany's new anti-Semitic campaign was handed down today by the Nuremberg court, which sentenced Wilhelm Johann Klein, 21, to 18 months' imprisonment.

Klein was accused of entering a Jewish home November 11 and taking clothing and valuables. The prosecution, calling him a "hyena of the battlefield," had asked a 20-month sentence.

A delegation of Protestant Church leaders urged President Roosevelt yesterday to "make a supreme effort" to help remove the causes of war, improve international economic relations, and to bring about "reduction and limitation of armaments."

The group, headed by Dr. Edgar De Witt Jones, of Detroit, presented a letter signed by the leaders of 21 national communions. The letter asked the President, in collaboration with the heads of other nations, to convene at the earliest possible moment a "world conference designed to achieve these objectives."

The delegation included Dr. Jones, president of the Federal Council of Churches; Dr. James H. Franklin, of Chester, Pa., representing the Northern Baptist Convention; Dr. Albert W. Palmer, of Chicago, representing the Congregational Christian Churches, and Roswell P. Barnes, an associate secretary of the Council of Churches.

Berlin, Nov. 17.—The desperate efforts of the Jews to make arrangements to leave the country and to facilitate the release of friends or relatives held in prison or concentration camps, or just to obtain common sense advice as to what they should do in the emergency, brought to the doors of the American consulate general here the biggest throng since the current terror began. Consular officials estimated the number of Jewish callers for the day at 2,800.

Some of the more wealthy among the Jews arrested here recently are being held practically for "ransom." Some of them may be finally released—that is, only after the Reich authorities have full assurance that these Jews have paid their respective shares in the $400,000,000 levy and the other "contributions" involved in the Nazi program for confiscation of the bulk of Jewish wealth.

South America Divided Over DefensiveUnity

Brazil Supports U. S. Argentina Opposed Uruguay Awaits Plan

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, Nov. 17.—A survey showed today that South America's larger powers were divided on the merits of President's proposal to unite the New World nations in a military bloc to hold off aggressors.

To suggestions that immigration barriers be lowered for Jews from Germany, officials generally were reluctant to express assent unless Jewish emigres were farmers or met other strict, legal limitations.

For Brazil, South America's largest country, Foreign Minister Oswald Aranha declared support for President Roosevelt's defensive plan.

But for Argentina, South America's wealthiest country, Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo flatly declared his opposition to such a project.

President Alfredo Baldomir, of Uruguay, which traditionally follows the Argentine lead in foreign policy, declined to commit himself. He told the Associated Press he would await formal presentation of a defensive plan and then give it careful study before making any pronouncement.

Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, South America's three main Atlantic Coast nations, were inclined to welcome only agricultural immigrants. All have adopted selective policies, aimed at encouraging only European settlers who are equipped to develop their vast hinterlands.

Cantilo hinted, in an interview, that the Argentine delegation to the forthcoming Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru, would support matters of continental interest but would be unwilling to consider any plan for a defensive bloc.

land hall, State Secretary Ernst Wilhelm Bohle declared:

"The shots fired at Davos, Barcelona and Paris (where assassinations of Nazis have occurred) had but one aim—Germany, the Third Reich.

"Germans living abroad are everywhere attending to their callings and working as loyal guests of the states in which they live.

"Yet they are targets for hatred, persecution and the calumnies of international sub-humanity, which concentrates all its strength upon the destruction of the resurrected Reich.

"The Jew (Grynszpan), by his own admission, wanted to strike at Germany in shooting Vom Rath. We were hard hit. But such persons always forget the Nazi movement grows but stronger through its martyrs."

Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, the other speaker at the funeral, used the words, "we understand the challenge, and accept it," that Hitler used at the funeral of Wilhelm Gustloff, Nazi organizer in Switzerland, who was killed February 4, 1936, by a Yugoslav student.

That ceremony precipitated intensified anti-Semitism in Germany.

Von Ribbentrop said that the Old World, apparently meaning the democracies, was definitely sinking and that a "sinister effort of international Jewry, inimical to everything" would be "unavailing."

"Lies and calumnies, persecution and murder are the means employed by international Jewry and other destructive powers which like to block Germany's road into the future," the foreign minister said.

"Their last victim was Party Comrade vom Rath.

"If now a new wave of hate strikes out at us in the world, if an attempt is made to desecrate the sacrifice of our deceased party comrade by new lies and calumnies, a storm of indignation rises throughout our nation.

"Its determination at all times to sacrifice everything for the Fuehrer and the Reich becomes all the firmer."

Duesseldorf newspapers reminded residents and visitors for the funeral to be on constant guard against Jews, but in the streets there was a notable absence of derogatory remarks about Jews.

The Angriff, Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels' newspaper, said 8,000 homes of Jews would become available shortly for Aryans in Berlin.

Party and city authorities apparently were preparing a decree by which the usual legal protection for tenants would be canceled in the case of Jews.

Denying Jews the right of legal notice of termination of a lease would mean any Ayran wanting a Jew's home could have the tenant evicted overnight.

Evening newspapers devoted most space to the ceremonies for Vom Rath, but also carried on their attacks on the United States and Great Britain.

British Pleased

London (Friday) Nov. 18 (AP).—The United States' new trade treaties with Great Britain and Canada were welcomed in Britain today as the forerunner of a new political and economic era.

Cheers for the pacts were almost universal, but there were some sections of British business which felt a better bargain could have been made on several products in the Anglo-American sphere.

There was extra enthusiasm in political quarters where it was believed the purely business arrangement concealed an unwritten, cooperative understanding among the English-speaking peoples of the United States, Britain and Canada.

The Board of Trade, in a summary of the Anglo-American agreement, called it an "important and significant step in efforts of the United Kingdom and United States governments to reduce trade barriers and so to contribute to world peace and prosperity."

The business community stood ready to execute a huge backlog of unfilled orders which have been waiting January 1, when the agreement becomes effective.

Britain Lowers Farm Duties, U.S. Its Tariff on Finished Goods

Trade

1936 a trade total of about $675,000,000

The Canadian-American trade, largest between any two countries in the world, may be judged by the facts that Canada takes about one-seventh of American exports, while the United States in all but one of the last 10 years has been the largest customer for Canada's exports, while supplying about three-fifths of Canada's imports.

Particular emphasis was placed yesterday on the concessions by Great Britain on agricultural exports from this country. Britain is by far the principal American market for agricultural products. In 1937, when such exports were sharply reduced by the 1936 drought, American exports of farm products to the United Kingdom were, nevertheless, valued at $261,000,000, about one-third of all American agricultural exports.

The most important concessions, therefore, obtained by this Government are those on farm products.

United Kingdom duties on wheat, lard, canned grapefruit and certain fruit juices were abolished entirely. Trade in these has been diverted by stiff duties.

Substantial reductions were obtained in duties on rice, apples, pears and certain canned fruits; an increase in the amount of American hams permitted to enter under the British quota system was granted; and the duty-free entry of ham and pork products, corn, other than flat white corn, and cotton was bound for the duration of the agreement.

Each of these items is big news to American agriculture. Even cautious State Department officials predict a steep rise in American farm exports, particularly in normal crop years.

Concessions made by this country to the United Kingdom involving American duties on British goods relate principally to textiles, metals and manufactures thereof, and specialties. Here reductions are generally limited to products complementary to, rather than competitive with, American-made goods. The total of 1937 trade in commodities involved was $141,500,000 of American imports from Britain.

The State Department stressed that while British exports to this country are naturally expected to rise sharply, "great care has been taken to keep the reductions in duty within such limits as to avoid injury to American industry."

One of the less-publicized but important moves yesterday was an exchange of notes between Great Britain and this country guaranteeing sympathetic consideration to representations either might make regarding access to raw materials.

Consultation Arranged

This meant simply that the United States' access to such essential raw materials as rubber from Malaya, or tin, would not be cut off without hearing. Similar treatment will be accorded Great Britain on materials imported from this country.

This was one of eight exchanges of notes between Secretary Hull and Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador here. One note safeguarded each country against additional duties imposed by one in consequence of export subsidies given by the other. Another exchange pledged advance notice of additional imposition of duties; another agreed to future consideration of Palestine exports; a further announced Great Britain's intention not to extend their preferential tariff treatment to her mandated colonies; another foreshadowed orderly marketing of citrus fruits, and one note contained a British promise to consult parties to the international rubber regulation agreement before exporting rubber planting material to countries outside that agreement.

On the Canadian agreement, the department noted that in the trade in both directions since the 1935 agreement the increases were in general "most marked in goods on which tariff barriers had been lowered."

In comparative statistics, Canada's imports of such goods from this country rose from $120,000,000 in 1935 to about $215,000,000 in 1937, an increase of 80 per cent.

Concessions by Canada

American imports from Canada in the same period and of the same class rose nearly 87 per cent, as compared with a 34 per cent increase in value of dutiable articles not specified, and of 35 per cent for free-duty articles. Drought had some effect here, however, it was noted.

Canadian concessions under the new agreement are made particularly on fruits and vegetables, fishery products, paper products, certain wood manufactures, two large so-called basket groups of chemicals, numerous heavy iron and steel products including tinplate, a large basket group of machinery, aircraft and engines, a number of important textiles including yarns, cloth and wearing apparel and other cotton, silk and rayon manufactures.

The Canadian duty on American automobiles, a major American export across the border, had been previously reduced but is now bound against increase by Canadian legislation.

Agriculture Department officials, however, pointed out to the Associated Press that no solution was offered for the problem of huge American surpluses of wheat and cotton. The continuation of cotton on the free list did not alter the situation in that branch of agriculture, while the wheat dumping practices of Canada, Argentina and other countries by means of subsidies, they said, offset the elimination of the wheat tariff.

Concessions made by the United States to Canada also cover a wide variety of goods. Although only about 40 per cent of American imports from Canada are subject to duty, reductions in those duties cover commodities which this nation imported from Canada in 1937 to a value of $121,000,000. This is 77 per cent of the value of all dutiable imports, and 31 per cent of the combined free and dutiable import total.

Most important American concessions to Canada, involving an improvement of the tariff position, are those on live cattle, hogs and pork products, cheese, eggs, grains other than wheat, grain by-products, maple sugar, potatoes, various fishery products, acetic acid, black pigments, brick, nickel, aluminum, zinc, cadmium certain cast-iron products, book paper, cheaper grades of tissue and crepe paper, silver-fox furs and Christmas trees.

Quota limits on Douglas fir and western hemlock lumber permitted to enter at reduced duties have been lifted entirely.

The most important single commodity concession by this country to Canada is on whisky, the same as in 1936, imports of which from Canada amounted in 1937 to $21,000,000. Other important items on which concessions remain the same are ferromanganese, live and dressed poultry, several classes of fish, various grass and clover seeds, turnips and pulpboard.

Continued free entry of many products has been bound.

In the British agreement the usual "escape clause" is provided, allowing either government to propose modifications if the rate of exchange of their currencies becomes uncontrollable. American financiers, in some instances, have feared the sharply fluctuating British pound, if devalued to $4.50, as rumored persistently, would permit British manufacturers to flood American markets with cheap goods.

This clause reads:

"If a wide variation should occur in the rate of exchange between the currencies of the United States of America and the United Kingdom, and if either contracting party should consider the variation so substantial as to prejudice the industries or commerce of the territories of that high contracting party, such high contracting party shall be free to propose negotiations for the modification of this agreement; and if agreement is not reached within 30 days after the receipt of such proposal, the high contracting party making the proposal shall be free to terminate the agreement in its entirety on giving 30 days' notice in writing to that effect."

Trade Pacts Not Expected to Reduce Surplus

Aids Pork-Raisers Wheat Not Affected No Change on Cotton

By the Associated Press.

Agriculture Department experts said last night the British and Canadian trade agreements should benefit American agriculture but not to the extent of greatly relieving existing surpluses.

Major advantages gained from the British, they said, would flow to producers of corn, hogs, rice, apples and citrus fruits.

No Aid to Cotton

On the other hand, Southern producers of cotton and tobacco, groups confronted with the most serious problem of excessive surpluses, gained no advantages not already possessed. Cotton continues on the free list in the British agreement. British import duties on tobacco, which give Dominion producers a price advantage, were continued in effect.

Although State Department officials emphasized that the British duty on American wheat, equivalent to 6 cents a bushel, was removed, other Government experts said the use of export dumping programs by Canada, Argentina and several other major wheat-producing countries tended to lessen the importance of this concession.

Because of dumping, wheat is selling in world markets for as much as 20 cents a bushel below American prices. At present, American wheat sold abroad is marketed at prices below domestic levels, and the Government makes up losses by export subsidies.

Consquently, sales to Great Britain, while made on an equality with Canada and Australia, will entail a loss as long as present conditions prevail, the experts said.

The experts predicted a 50 per cent expansion in British purchases of lard, one of the major products of the Midwestern corn belt. The agreement likewise substantially enlarged British import quotas of American hams, cured pork and other pork products.

Generally speaking, the agreement with Canada granted that country concessions on such important farm commodities as cattle and dairy products in return for Canadian concessions on American manufactured products.

Protest Expected

Agriculture Department officials expressed belief, however, that the Canadian treaty would result in indirect benefits to American agriculture. They said increased Canadian purchases of American industrial goods would increase American payrolls and thereby give American labor the means of buying larger quantities of farm products.

Officials anticipated some objections from Eastern and Midwestern dairy farmers and Midwestern cattle farmers on concessions to Canada. A flood of protests greeted similar concessions in the Canadian treaty of 1936.

History Made at Cabinet Table As Democracies Free Trade

Sign

huge, gilt-edged, ribbon-bound volumes containing the agreements the five men bound their nations to new pacts drawing the world's biggest democracies together through pledges to expand their present $1,500,000,000 of trade each year.

The East Room is a room filled with ghosts. It has seen tragedy, when the murdered Lincoln lay in state; low comedy, when a Japanese jiu-jitsu expert threw the ponderous William Howard Taft over his shoulder while President "Teddy" Roosevelt roared with laughter; danger, as the perilous moment in 1814 when Dolly Madison refused to leave until Jean Sioussat slashed down from the wall the huge Stuart portrait of George Washington, with the British only a few blocks away; glitter, such as the time the Duke of Windsor danced there as a shy youth.

Seldom has it witnessed a scene of greater international moment than yesterday's, not even when the Kellogg-Brian Peace Pact of 1929 was signed.

There was no fanfare. The only glitter came from the three huge chandeliers and from the golden epaulets of the British, American and Canadian military and Naval aides who stood at the door.

In a semicircle around the old walnut table sat a varied audience of the Cabinet members, Senators, Representatives and others. Women in silver fox capes, girls in sports dresses, reporters in old tweeds attested the democracy of the gathering.

In the second row of the audience sat a man for whom the ceremony and the scene held special significance—Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre, who was one of the major negotiators of the present agreements, and who was married in that room 25 years ago to the late Jessie Woodrow Wilson. President Roosevelt in his informal remarks singled out Sayre for special commendation for his prolonged and intensive work in the last year on the agreements.

The Canadian premier, who stayed last night at the White House, was greeted by Union Station at 12:50 p. m. by the Canadian Minister, Sir Herbert Marler, Secretary Hull, Legation and State Department officials, Marvin H. McIntyre, Secretary to the President, and the White House military aide, Col. Edwin Watson, and the Naval aide, Commander Daniel Callaghan.

After posing for the newsreels, the group was escorted downtown. King held a press conference in the huge oak-paneled reception room of the Canadian Legation on Massachusetts avenue.

It is believed that King will discuss with the President the latter's proposal for continental solidarity against aggression from abroad through greater national defense. King said yesterday he believed those remarks of the President were an extension of his speech earlier this year at Kingston, Ontario.

At 4 o'clock the President entered the East Room on the arm of Col. Watson, as the assembly stood. Behind the historic table mammoth yellow chrysanthemums flared from two great black vases and on the four white mantels, below the ceiling-high mirrors, bowls of yellow asters stood. The huge French windows had been opened and the pale curtains bellied against the heavy crimson drapes brilliant in the autumn sun.

The President picked up one slim pen first, but Charles M. Barnes, head of the State Department's treaty division, stopped him, explaining he had planned to have Secretary Hull sign. The President bowed to protocol, and Hull, King, Sir Ronald and Sayre signed the Canadian agreement in that order. The British agreement was then signed.

In seven minutes the pacts had been concluded, after one full year of the most arduous and involved technical negotiations. The President said, smiling as he rolled the pen in his fingers:

"I want to recall that this signing takes place precisely on the third anniversary of the first great trade agreement between the United States and Canada."

Present as an aide to King was O. D. Skelton, the affable secretary for external affairs of Canada. King, after his White House stay, will remove to the Canadian Legation, where he will remain over the week-end. He will leave Monday for Ottawa.

Hull, after the signing, said:

"Through the conclusion of these agreements our three nations have given a new vitality to the basic principles of a civilized world order, the acceptance and application of which are indispensable to economic well-being and social security within nations, to peaceful relations between nations and therefore to the continued advancement and progress of mankind."

King noted that in Canada there will be "genuine satisfaction that in facing the problems of today, the two countries with whose fortunes those of Canada are so closely linked, have effectively strengthened the friendly relations which have long prevailed between them."

Sir Ronald said "On this sound and healthy basis, trade will be facilitated, the prosperity of our peoples increased and the arts of peace encouraged. I share fully the sentiments expressed by the Secretary of State as to the promise for improvement in relations among nations which grows out of international negotiations of the kind which have been so happily concluded between our two countries."

See New England Hurt

Boston, Nov. 17 (AP).—Two New England governors tonight attacked the trade treaties with Great Britain and Canada.

Gov. George D. Aiken (Republican) of Vermont said that from a preliminary reading it appeared New England had been "traded or sold out" for whatever benefits might accrue to other sections of this country.

Gov. Lewis O. Barrows (Republican) of Maine said he could not help but feel the treaties "will adversely affect the State of Maine."

Roosevelt Is Presented Big Mounted Marlin

By the Associated Press

A 90-pound, 8-foot mounted marlin was presented to President Roosevelt yesterday by a group of fishermen from Ocean City, Md.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

THE FIRST growing pains have seized upon the Wage-Hour Division, and that pinched, harassed look is on the faces of the administrative officers who give a minute here and a minute there to the scores of daily callers, most of whom have a grouch of one sort or another.

So yesterday they were asked about the promotions-from-within policy, recently adopted by Administrator Andrews. They were told that there is talk in the building that the policy may prove of little benefit to Labor Department workers.

It seems that the Administrator got Presidential approval for borrowing needed employes from other departments until such time as Congress appropriates sufficient funds to operate the Wage-Hour Division. And many in the building are now wondering if all the borrowed personnel, many of whom are paid by WPA and other agencies, won't get permanent status in the division when the funds come through.

Not likely, say the administrative heads—that is, not necessarily so. In the first place, the Wage-Hour is to operate under civil service, and the majority of the borrowed employes have no Civil Service status. They would have to compete with everybody and his brother who wanted a chance at the jobs.

Again, the new division is up against the problem of having to reach a mile with a shoestring. It has little funds now to use on anybody; that it has to do many things it doesn't want to do was made clear.

The U. F. W. A. Local 12 says it secured the original agreement with Administrator Andrews for job preference to Labor Department workers, and "as a result the Administrator announced that Labor Department employes would be given first preference in the selection of personnel and other Government workers would have second choice. To date, the Wage Hour Division has borrowed on detail employes paid by WPA and other agencies, but has been unable to complete a similar arrangement with other bureaus of the Labor Department," the Local says.

The Wage-Hour spokesmen say the division has no intention of retreating from its promises. In any event the lack of funds is the current bother, and dissatisfaction may be expected for a while.

FOR EIGHT and a half years Clifford C. Presnall lived as a naturalist in Yosemite, Zion and Bryce Canyon National Parks. Now Presnall is assistant chief of the Wildlife Division, NPS, and is a storehouse of wilderness stories. He will unload some of these—delightfully, we predict—before an audience in the Departmental Auditorium at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening. The admission is free; the public is invited.

Presnall is the sort of man who can put bear stalking techniques in reverse; instead of being run to cover, he chases the bear up the tree—and once the bear had a brace of cubs along with her, which made the occurrence even more extraordinary. On this occasion Presnall used the technique of standing back a polite distance and using vocal persuasion, coupled with a vigorous waving of a heavy boot. He doesn't recommend the system for amateurs—but all this is stealing his lecture thunder. Go and hear his tale about it. The pictures he uses will be his own; he is good with a camera.

NOTES: Again on the subject of the turkey carving experiments in Home Economics, Agriculture, we suspect that those bored looks on the faces of the seven tasters are stage faces. The conclusion is based on this: Six of the seven who sit about the tables three or four times a week were the tasters of last year—and there is nothing in the Civil Service rules and regulations that say they have to volunteer a second time. Anybody who ever saw Miss Lucy Alexander pull one of those golden brown birds from the experimental ovens on the sixth floor knows how much persuasion would be required to get somebody to taste of that chunk of juicy meat . . . The renowned In-Com-Co Club (which has the finest dancers in town in its membership) is looking for a theme song. A young lady has agreed to set to music any appropriate words that are submitted. Anything with that over-used Cornell tune or the "On the Road to Mandalay" airs will be ruled out without a reading.

Junior stenographers in Agriculture stand a chance of getting up a grade in the examinations to be given by the Personnel Office on December 1. (Conference Room 1039, South Building, 9 a. m.). It's in line with the policy of filling vacancies within the service wherever possible. The exam will establish a list of junior stenographers qualified for promotion by length of service in the junior grade and possessing a sufficient stenographic speed to meet the competitive Civil Service standards . . . A rumor with disturbing aspect, now floating around, holds that so much attention will be paid to national defense that much Federal employe legislation will go by the board in the next Congress; also that agencies may be cut to balance off the tremendous armament expenditures.

Hazen Pledges Jury Inquiry On Police Graft

Brown Also Acts • Shake-up Is Hinted Warring Trial Studied

By Howard P. Wentworth.

A Federal grand jury investigation of allegations of graft within the Metropolitan Police Department was promised last night by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen at conclusion of present conspiracy proceedings against the Warring brothers.

Incensed by testimony at the Warring income tax conspiracy trial describing reputed payoffs of "protection money" to members of the police force, Hazen said steps would be taken to "make these men (the Warrings) talk and name any individuals who have been accepting graft."

"We are going to get to the bottom of these charges if it is the last thing we do," Hazen declared, thumping on his desk. "I am tired of these repeated insinuations of bribe-taking by policemen. Even if it means a shake-up of the whole department, we are going to ferret out the rumored grafters—and woe to the guilty parties."

"Observers" Ordered

After reading published accounts of monthly "protection" payments reputedly made by Warring mobsters—as outlined by Government witnesses at the conspiracy trial—he ordered "observers" from the Police Department and corporation counsel's office to attend all courtroom sessions.

Capt. George M. Little, commander of the police Vice Squad, and a representative of Corportaion Counsel Seal's office were assigned to the trial under instructions to make careful notes on phases of the proceedings which hint directly or indirectly at police-underworld alliances.

Hazen's action followed closely a similar decision by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent. Shortly after reaching his office yesterday morning, Brown summoned his Vice Squad chief and assigned him to the Warring trial.

Up to Hazen

It is understood that United States Attorney David A. Pine will not press graft charges during the Warring prosecution, mindful of the Hines mistrial in New York when District Attorney Dewey attempted to interject the same type of testimony into a conspiracy trial.

"That," said Hazen, "will leave it up to us. At the end of this present trial—no matter what the outcome—we are going to call for a transcript of the testimony and study it closely for any possible leads in our search for reported recipients of bribes."

Any direct investigation by District officials, said Hazen, must await conclusion of the current trial.

"But we are going to follow it right straight through," he added. "If there is any graft-taking in the Police Department we want to know it—and we intend to find out. We will take action compelling everyone concerned to talk, and our first move will be to the grand jury."

Aroused by Testimony

Hazen was particularly aroused by the testimony of H. Watson Leese, Internal Revenue agent, who quoted Emmett Warring, so called "brains" of the racket mob, as admitting he paid "protection" to keep his numbers business on a thriving basis.

Reese further quoted Emmett Warring as saying that $400 a month was paid in 1934 and $1,000 a month in 1935 for "protection." Although not directly brought out, it was indicated that a portion of this "payoff" went to police officers.

Maj. Brown said he "wanted the names of every member of his command" who was in any way linked with gang protection payments.

"The place for such officers," Brown declared," is before the Police Trial Board, but we can't take them before the board until we know who they are. Our first move is to make somebody talk—and then we can finish the job."

Brown recalled some years ago that individual policemen were "mixed up" with the Warring racket gang by persistent rumors of "payoffs."

Scout Car Cleared

At that time, Brown said, a certain scout car was reported making regular visits to the corner of Twenty-fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest—hangout of the Warring mobsters—to collect protection payments.

"For a period of several days," Brown related, "we kept a careful watch on the corner and not once did the suspected car appear. A long and painstaking investigation led us nowhere. These rumors of graft have continued for many years—and I feel the time has come to get at the bottom of the whole thing."

Men within the department known for their honesty and ability, Brown indicated, will head the inquiry.

"And we don't intend to give up until we have either cleared the department's good name or until we have found and brought to trial any officer or officers who may have a hand in this thing," Brown added.

$4,000,000 Bet With Warrings on Numbers In 2½ Years, Books Show in Conspiracy Trial

Warring

of the gang," and Leo Paul, 35, the "hard worker"—and Sadur's brother-in-law partner, Henry L. Scherr. All five face a possible two years in jail and $10,000 fine if found guilty.

When Leese stepped down after being grilled again and again on his testimony of a dozen conferences, the record showed no weakening of his story that the Warrings confessed spending up to $2,000 a month for "protection."

Both Leese and William H. F. Swain, Treasury Intelligence agent, swore that when the bribe question was brought up Sadur said "Well, if you want the books to show it, I'll put it in" and wrote $13,000 with a red pencil in both columns in their presence and in their offices. Yet, Leese said his audit showed, the $13,000 had already been claimed—and hidden—by being entered as part of the gang's losses.

Placed in evidence was an affidavit by Henry L. Sherr that Sadur knew this. Sherr swore he had devised the stratagem of concealing the bribes in the losses and that Sadur told him that was not the way to do it. So, Sherr swore, Sadur made in his own office the red entries of $13,000 that the two agents said they saw him make at the Treasury. He thus added the sum both to receipts and expenses, which failed to change the net, but left hidden the $13,000 tucked away in the loss column, the testimony showed.

Swain testified that when Sadur had made the entries the agents told him that the bribes were not a lawful deduction from income tax and that he first disputed them.

"You ought to know it," Swain said Sadur was told and that then Sadur acknowledged that he had known the bribes could not be deducted.

That was when Treasury Agent John Cox told Sadur he was going to have Sadur disbarred, Swain swore.

Sadur was to get $1,500 for handling the Warring taxes, a Government witness yesterday said Emmitt Warring told him.

Presentation to the jury of Sherr's affidavit directed attention to the behavior of the defendants which has not varied since selection of the jury began Tuesday morning.

Partners Don't Speak

Sadur sits at the end of the defense counsel table, to the left of Justice Laws' left. About as far away from Sadur as the dimensions of the court make possible, at Justice Laws' right, sits his brother-in-law, Scherr, with his lawyer, former Assistant District Attorney Goldstein.

Sadur has not been seen to speak to Scherr and Scherr has not been seen to speak Sadur since the trial started. Neither has been seen to speak to the Warrings and the Warrings have not spoken to them.

Rover has done most of the defense questioning so far.

Divided thus in three camps, the conspiracy defendants saw introduction of the Warring accounts books. District Attorney Pine introduced the photostatic copies made by the Treasury. Defense counsel produced the originals, which they offered the court Wednesday.

The 11 men and one woman on the jury clustered about Justice Laws to follow Leese as he explained the gang's system of bookkeeping. The judge left the bench and stepped into the jury box to watch the explanation.

The Government's testimony yesterday showed that in 1934 the Warrings started keeping books on July 9. Between then and the end of the year Washington bettors handed them $288,000 in wagers on the numbers. About $95,000 of this never reached the gang headquarters, being kept by "runners" and others. Of the $203,000 the Warrings received they paid out to winning bettors only $168,000.

The next year, the ledgers showed, the gang's business rose close to the $2,000,000 turnover charged by District Attorney Pine. The gross amount bet was $1,907,235.81. The underworld henchmen who acted as go-betweens between the gang and their "customers" received $572,-170.74 of this money.

$1,233,117 Paid to Bettors

This made the gang's "net play" in 1935 $1,335,065.07. Out of this they paid back to the betters who won, $1,233,117.80. They paid their henchmen a further $80,021.69 in "commissions," these being the commissions figuring in their purported business of "commission brokers." The office staff collected $24,244.15 in salaries. They spent $3,990.85 on stationery and office supplies.

Of similar magnitude were the transactions revealed by the ledgers for 1936. These, the Treasury agents pointed out, gave a gross "play" of $1,844,175.90. Again the underworld kept more than half a million dollars in "commissions," the total being $553,949.77. This left to reach the gang headquarters a "net play" of $1,290,231.13.

Rover paused once in grilling Leese to ask the prosecutors what they claimed the Warrings' net income was in the year they reported about $6,000, and the initial Treasury audit of their books showed about $11,000.

"Some $85,000," snapped Assistant District Attorney Wilson. The Government claims that the books must be wrong because the Warrings can be shown to have spent much more on houses, automobiles and living expenses. Pine has stressed the testimony that they admitted they had no such sums when they started in the numbers racket.

It was noted that the income reported by the Warrings for 1935 amounted to less than $2,000 apiece for 1935. Their salary list for 1936 showed that they paid several workers in gang headquarters nearly that much and that some of their outside henchmen got much more.

The quiet, slender Leese was slow and careful in his answers Wednesday. Yesterday Rover's cross-examination guided him back into his own specialty and he took on assurance as he traced the Warring's business operations through hundreds of sheets covered with figures, identifying expenses, tracking down what he said were profits and indicating complicated errors.

Efforts to trip him up left him good humored.

"I can also show you the items that made up the additional $3,199.-46, Mr. Rover," he chirped once when the defense lawyer pressed him about a sum Leese said the Warrings should have reported.

"I am not what you might call an expert in the numbers business," Leese began when he was invited to explain "gross play," "hits" and other phrases. He then explained that the Warrings' runners retained 30 per cent of the gross take and that the gang books showed only 70 per cent.

Not only did the operators get the benefit of 40 chances in every 100, Leese said, but they had what were called "cut numbers," which were numbers on which the odds were still further reduced because they hit frequently.

Nearly an hour Rover and Leese sparred about the pages in the ledger for four days in January of 1935, which were blank. Leese calculated that the amount handled by the Warrings in the four days was $11,000 odd. Rover tried to make him admit that he added this estimate into the Warrings' receipts for the year. After several questions on this subject, Leese adopted for his answers the formula, " . . . . . and I did not add in the $11,000, Mr. Rover"—which he inserted into every reply.

Seal Enters Court

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal entered court at this point and exchanged a series of notes with District Attorney Pine. Pine acceded to a request that Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch be permitted to observe the proceedings, alert for some clew to the names of the policemen who got the $400 to $2,000 a month the Warrings say they paid in bribes.

The rules forbid a lawyer entering the care after the jury in empaneled, so Gasch did not join Pine and Wilson.

The day's only ripple of amusement came when Leese referred to two days in August, 1936, as "the Popeye days" in numbers history. He then explained that a comic strip character mentioned three digits on which numbers bettors plunged. The numbers hit each time.

Emmitt Warring later said the "Popeye days" cost the outfit $42,000.

Board Named For Audit of Clerk's Books

Crawford 'at a Loss' Is Under Suspension Confers With Seal

A five-man board of inquiry last night was faced with the difficult task of auditing and examining all books, papers and accounts of Howard E. Crawford, suspended chief clerk of the Police Department.

The inquiry, it was predicted, will take several months. Crawford, at a loss to explain his sudden suspension, conferred with police heads in the office of Corporation Counsel Seal before the audit was started.

Named to conduct the investigation were Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, who will carry on Crawford's work; Detective Sergt. Earl P. Hartman and Lieut. Floyd Truscott. Assigned from the office of Auditor Donovan were Paul Keen and George Kidwell.

Three requests made by Crawford were granted, following the conference with officials. He asked to be personally represented at the investigation, that he be given receipts for all property and papers turned over to Inspector Edwards, and that he be permitted to remove his personal belongings from the guarded clerk's office at Police Headquarters.

The directors of the Police Relief Association, of which Crawford is secretary and treasurer, decided at a meeting last night to retain him until the election in January. The president and trustees reported they had his books audited yesterday and found them in perfect condition.

A Major Dilemma

One instinctively feels there is something fundamentally wrong with taxation of income obtained through gambling, bootlegging and racketeering. No doubt the average citizen would rather have a dangerous individual such as Al Capone imprisoned for failure to pay his income taxes than to let him remain at large. Nevertheless, the legal protection afforded tax-paying criminals against betrayal to local officials creates a very awkward and often intolerable situation.

The prosecution of the Warring brothers for alleged conspiracy to defraud the Government of taxes due on income from illegal gambling activities in the District affords an outstanding illustration of the dilemma confronting revenue officials. An employe of the Bureau of Internal Revenue testified that the Warrings had discussed with him the method of handling bribes paid to policemen and other persons. The Treasury, the witness explained, objected to the methods of accounting for the protection money. But, as disclosures were confidential, neither the police nor the Department of Justice could be informed.

This policy frequently makes the Government a beneficiary of illegal activities unknown to the law enforcement agencies. The first reaction to this unfortunate situation is to condemn the secrecy of income tax returns and demand that the revenue agencies make public all information relating to illegal activities divulged by taxpayers.

Obviously such a policy would deprive the Government of some income now obtained from shady and illegal activities. But if the law enforcement agencies were 100 per cent efficient, income of this kind would not be available for taxation. Moreover, we should be spared the spectacle of our Government sharing the rewards of law-breaking.

However, should Treasury officials betray the confidence reposed in them by a few wrongdoers, they would at once be faced by the question of where to draw the line between those who should be reported and those entitled to protection. Public confidence would be shaken by using income-tax returns as a means of locating and apprehending criminals.

Here is an extremely difficult problem. So far nobody has suggested a satisfactory solution. It should be receiving the attention of our best legal minds.

Realistic Speed Limit

At first glance it may seem strange that the Advisory Committee on Traffic Safety has recommended raising the speed limit for the District. Fast driving is usually regarded as a foremost cause of the highway accidents which this committee is working to prevent.

Actually, however, there is no inconsistency in the committee's proposal. Its suggestion that the speed limit be increased from 22 to 25 miles per hour is made with the understanding that the new regulation would be strictly enforced. Every Washingtonian knows that this is not the case with the present speed limit. Both the police and the courts recognize that it is obsolete. Motorists are seldom arrested, and almost never convicted, for traveling at any rate of speed less than 30 miles per hour.

At present the real speed limit is fixed by the police and the courts at various points above the 22-mile rate provided by law. That is obviously an unsatisfactory situation. But it is likely to continue in effect until the legal restrictions are brought in line with what safety experts, the police, the courts and the public believe to be reasonable.

Some may raise the objection that a 25-mile limit would also be difficult to enforce. Any speed law naturally requires both police vigilance and driver co-operation to be effective. The adoption of a 25-mile limit, however, would give the police a new mandate meeting with general community approval, which is the first objective. Few American cities now attempt to keep their traffic slower than 25 miles per hour. Several have improved their safety records by coupling realistic speed regulation with more rigid enforceme[illegible]

Presumably t[illegible]peed limit on various main thorou[illegible] would remain unchanged. That is entirely reasonable, although a study might well be made with the object of eliminating frequent speed-limit changes on these streets.

The committee's further indorsement of pedestrian control comes at a time when officials are preparing regulations for that purpose to be studied by civic groups. Its proposed bill, calling for the establishment of a permanent Traffic Safety Commission, is excellent in objective, though less impressive as to organization. Many composite traffic committees are already in existence. The function of the proposed commission might be more effectively performed by a special assistant to the director of traffic whose sole duty would be in the field of accident prevention.

Much More Than Trade

"It must be increasingly apparent," said the Canadian Prime Minister, on the occasion of the signing of the trade agreements yesterday, "that the stability of the civilization we cherish depends more than ever on the friendly association of the great English-speaking nations of the Old World and the New."

The major significance of these two agreements—both the new one with Great Britain and the replacement of the 1935 pact with Canada—lies in their practical demonstration of the "friendly association" which Mr. Mackenzie King rightly regards as all-important.

These commercial treaties are a positive and substantial proof of the community of interest which unites, and which under pressure will increasingly unite, the English-speaking world. They are the correction of such mistakes as our neutrality legislation on the one hand and the British leadership in the Munich agreement on the other. They increase and strengthen the fundamental ties between peoples whose ideals are similar and whose strength, in combination, is irresistible.

As the intricate schedules of concessions are studied the immediate economic benefits and disadvantages for the contracting parties will become apparent. There is reason to believe, aside from the assurance of the Department of State on the subject, that "American agriculture and industry should gain much from these two agreements." But even if that were not the case, even if we had made concessions really injurious to a few domestic interests, the agreements now happily signed would still be well worthwhile. The good of the whole would outweigh the loss of the few. And nobody can today seriously argue that these agreements are not in the national interest.

Until yesterday it was an open question as to whether or not the principle of relatively unrestricted trade between nations would win out over the hostile theory of governmental barter. The success of Secretary Hull's program was seriously jeopardized not merely by the relative success of German autarchy but also by the preferential imperial policy of Great Britain. Through the gap between the British system and that initiated by the United States the German principles were making substantial headway. This gap is now closed.

With its closing some 80 per cent of all international trade is now in the hands of those countries which have pledged themselves to the preservation of liberal commercial policies. The share of the totalitarian states in world trade is only about 20 per cent. And the significance of this disproportion is enormous.

The disproportion means that very great pressure will immediately begin to operate on Germany, on Italy and on Japan, to modify their barter systems. The alternative is a progressive loss of markets to countries within the new Anglo-American commercial orbit. This threat is very real, particularly for Germany. For that country produces nothing which cannot be equally well obtained elsewhere. And increasing loss of markets would constitute a terrible problem for the already overstrained German economy.

Confronted with the new Anglo-American trade policy, Germany must pursue one of two general alternatives. She must either take steps profoundly to modify the program of autarchy, on which the power of the Nazi regime has been largely built, or she must proceed to dominate by force markets which will tend to contract for her in favor of the Anglo-American entente.

It will help in understanding present international maneuvers if this situation is steadily kept in mind. All nations, of course, must anticipate the possibility that Germany will proceed to forceful expansion. For that reason the democratic nations must arm as never before, and otherwise prepare to confront what is a very real threat. On the other hand, it is entirely possible that the Germans will realize, particularly when they see that the rest of the world is well aware of the issues involved, that they must turn to more liberal, less dictatorial trade practices. In that event there will be no war and there will be, eventually, a Germany in which the virtues of a great people may again flourish.

Between the lines of every official statement on the new trade agreements is an olive branch to Germany. There is clearly no disposition to force that country into acts of desperation. There is, on the contrary, the keenest anxiety to help Germany to regain her rightful place as a great commercial nation, animated by liberal motives and released from the perpetual nightmare of her present tyranny. In the words of the Canadian Prime Minister:

We cannot too earnestly hope that they (the agreements signed yesterday) will provide to other countries an example of the mutual advantages which flow from the broadening of trade relations, not only in the realm of material well-being, but in the wider sphere of human understanding and good will.

Up To The President

Washingtonians who look with dismay upon the projected transformation of the Tidal Basin should visit that area. The work of destruction has already begun. Although it refuses to cut a single cherry tree, the office of National Capital Parks has been moving trees from the site of the Jefferson Memorial for two weeks. From these beginnings it is easy to visualize the ghastly spectacle which this lovely park will present when the Tidal Basin has been drained, its southeast shore denuded and the surrounding area ripped to pieces by steam shovels.

Few citizens have realized what it means in terms of desolation to make over a natural park so as to accommodate a huge marble memorial. But the nature of the havoc planned in Potomac Park is becoming increasingly clear. No one who has pride in the Nation's Capital can afford to ignore this threat of heedless destruction in order to locate a memorial in an unsuitable place.

Taking note of vehement public protests, Stuart G. Gibboney, acting chairman of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, announces that only 171 cherry trees will be transplanted or chopped down. Apparently the public outcry has already had a beneficial effect, for officials last week said that 328 cherry trees must go. It is all too obvious, however, that no amount of salvage of this sort will substantially mitigate the blunder of locating a huge classical shrine in this informal setting.

The implication may be drawn from Mr. Gibboney's statement that the commission has no intention of postponing work on the monument until Congress has a chance to pass judgment upon it free from the deceit which characterized the successful request for an initial appropriation. If that is so, only the President can prevent a costly and tragic blunder.

A few months ago there were appeals to the President to stop work on the Bureau of Public Roads laboratories which have now become a hazard to his cherished project of a model Washington Airport. A word from the President at that time might have saved taxpayers many thousands of dollars. Today a word from him would not only prevent the ravages of a steam-shovel invasion of the cherry blossom area; it would also permit the replanning of Jefferson's Memorial so as to make it a genuine shrine instead of a bitterly resented mausoleum in the Capital's springtime garden.

As the President makes his statement to the press today this responsibility will stand out with unmistakable clarity. Indeed, if this project is forced through, despite official misrepresentation and vigorous public protests, it will honor those responsible for it even less than it honors Jefferson.

Belated Suggestion

If Administrator Hopkins had suggested a few months earlier that the WPA ought to be put under civil service rules, the recommendation might have been received with some enthusiasm by his critics. With the election in the background, however, his belated appeal to eliminate petty politics and political influence from relief can hardly be taken very seriously.

The last election undoubtedly showed that WPA employes cannot be counted upon to afford a solid support for the Administration. But regardless of how relief beneficiaries vote, they are not immune to pressure to contribute to party funds in order to curry favor with administrative officials connected with the WPA. We have the assurance of the Sheppard Committee investigating campaign expenditures that the WPA organization played a very important role in the pre-election contests in some States.

Presumably the recommendation to extend civil service rules to the WPA would include only administrative and supervisory officials. Even in that case, the plan, if accepted, would be equivalent to a declaration that the WPA is to become a permanent agency of the Government. That hope has been repeatedly expressed by Mr. Hopkins who believes that widespread unemployment is a chronic affliction calling for a permanent Federal agency to provide jobs.

Obviously Mr. Hopkins is trying to salvage the agency which his loose policies threaten to destroy. What is needed is not a facade of virtue and efficiency, such as adoption of the merit system would give the WPA, but a new relief system. If Congress is ready to grapple with the country's biggest problems on its return in January, it will approach the WPA with the ax and not a badge of merit.

Some things are many times funnier than anything that might be said about them. The wise wisecracker, therefore, refrains from commenting on the current millinery.

Chests Of Two Cities

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Baltimore Community Fund campaign which was recently conducted in Baltimore had for its quota $1,177,000. The population of Baltimore is 804,874.

The Community Chest campaign which is now in progress in Washington has for its quota $2,127,000, and yet the population of Washington is only 486,869. How come?

S. JOHN COPPOLA.
Baltimore, Md., Nov. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The question asked by Mr. Coppola is explained as follows:

In Baltimore there are three separate campaigns—one conducted by the Baltimore Community Fund, with a goal of $1,177,000; one conducted by the Jewish Federation, with a goal of $750,000, and one conducted by Catholic agencies, with goals of approximately $250,000. Therefore the goals total $2,117,000. In addition there are hospital appeals and the State makes large appropriations for child welfare, care of the aged and hospitalization.

In Washington, on the other hand, there is one campaign, because the Catholic and Jewish agencies are included in the Washington Community Chest, instead of putting on separate appeals and eight hospitals are paid from Chest funds for services rendered to patients who need financial aid to secure hospital care.

It should further be noticed that the population of the District of Columbia is now estimated at 629,000 instead of 486,869, as quoted by Mr. Coppola, and in addition, the Community Chest appeal is made on behalf of the Conference of Social Welfare Organizations, and therefore solicits persons living in Alexandria, Arlington and Prince Georges County. Thus the population solicited is some 829,000, which is greater than that of Baltimore itself.

Director of the Eleventh Annual Campaign of the Community Chest.

Russia's Balanced Budget

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Q. E. D." states that nine nations have resorted to dictatorship since the war, "all due to communism." To which I reply, "Bunk." Communism has not caused any dictatorships. It is an effect, not a cause.

When either feudalism or capitalism is unable to longer function or to fool the majority of the people, resort is made to some kind of dictatorship. That was true long before there was any organized communism.

Reactionary (Fascist or Nazi) dictatorships merely make a bad matter worse. Censorships conceal the real economic facts. But Soviet Russia annually balances her budget, with a comfortable reserve left over, in addition to expanding educationally and industrially. What Fascist or Nazi dictatorship is doing that, aside from military preparations for war? My authority is the World Almanac for 1938. It is nonpartisan and factual. Nothing radical about it. A. S. E. ELY.
Washington, Nov. 15.

Why?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With due respect for President Roosevelt's humanitarian utterances in regard to the Jewish people in Germany, the question naturally presents itself: Why hasn't our Chief Executive displayed similiar horror and indignation toward Russia, Italy, Spain and Japan for similar atrocities?

The recent rape of Ethiopia by Italy was regarded with a degree of complacency by the Administration while nothing was done to check the outrages perpetrated in Spain and China by aggressors.

What is the answer? Won't someone give it?

"MISSOURI MINDED."

"Let Us Not Be Drawn Into Bypaths"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Group Health is not a charitable or public organization. It is a private co-operative association of a selected and limited number of Government employes trying against unreasonable opposition to provide medical care for its members on a predetermined cost. As one of the fortunate ones in this great city who can and does benefit by its efficient services, I firmly believe such benefits to health should be made more widely available, both by public and private methods. America's "ability to consume" good health would appear to be rather limitless.

The Community Chest for some years has made another type of experiment in the health field, by paying a minimum cost, or part of the cost, of the care of thousands and thousands of sick and harassed people who are unable to do this for themselves. The Health Security Administration is the Chest member organization that handles the necessary preliminaries to such care. That during the first eight months of this year it purchased from the hospitals over 10,000 days of hospital care for people in the lower income brackets of the Federal Government pay roll is testimony of the need of methods for spreading the emergency and heavy financial loads due to serious illness.

If the Community Chest should stop giving any money to the hospitals it would not deprive the hospitals of their supporting profit-paying patients, but only of their cost and below-cost patients. The hospitals, being private organizations, would function as before, except that those parts operated below cost could close, or contract, as the hospitals felt necessary, and great numbers of needy people would be without essential medical aid.

It is a calamity that Group Health should be forced by some of its zealous proponents into a position where it may bear unwittingly the blame for trying to withhold medical assistance to the poor and suffering. If the Community Chest funds fall short, God forbid, it may even be unjustly accused of much more than keeping food from the starving. So does it suffer in the hands of its friends.

The members of Group Health were never asked to indorse the sticker campaign for limited Chest contributions. The stickers were sent out anonymously. One unreasonable and prejudiced opposition against Group Health methods met by another unreasonable and illogical interference with a second Group Health method can bring about ramifications of bitterness and defeat to all concerned. Two wrongs do not make a right.

Fifty-eight great-hearted and public-spirited organizations have banded together, in a voluntary association to provide of the essentials of happiness for the babies, the boys and girls, the mothers, the fathers, the sick, the unfortunate, for all who need a hand up. Let us not be drawn into bypaths. The goal is to make as many of those essentials possible as we can, by filling to the brim and over our Community Chest. WILDA P. MACKENZIE.
Washington, Nov. 16.

The Political Cycle

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Walter Lippmann's story in the November 12 Post on the inevitable recurrence of political cycles rests on solid ground. Undulation is the most universal phenomenon in nature. Everything moves in waves. Everything causes waves. Rhythms of light, sound, births, deaths, wars, sunspots, strikes, politics, dietary fads, styles of dress, religious beliefs, political complexions—all exhibit wave movements in pretty regular cycles. Twelve years ago I made a statistical study of cycles varying in length from one to 250 years and concluded that when we examine economic or political fluctuations we are really studying the constitution of the universe.

For example since 1857 our serious panics have occurred at intervals averaging eight or nine years. By another interesting coincidence new religious sects, new political parties, extensive sunspots, serious drouths and bad grasshopper visitations have appeared in 13-year cycles. Greenbackers, Mugwumps, Bullmoosers, New Freedomites, and New Dealers in the period between 1880 and 1932 emerged serially at intervals of 13 years. I doubt whether these five political aberrations were definitely connected with sunspots and grasshopper outbreaks.

An interesting point is that in each case it has taken us about eight years to become dehypnotized. But it seems to require 13 years to assign the roles, put through the rehearsals and set the stage for the debut of a new political experiment. Thus we take eight years to awake from the nightmare, then enjoy five years of calm and prosperity and then we are off after the rainbow again. Mr. Lippmann suggested a clever explanation of why we behave that way. Those who are interested in the subject of political flip-flops should read his article.

The amusing part of it is that all the leaders of these political balloon excursions have believed that Utopia is just around the corner or that we are merely on a "mental migration" as the great New Dealer has tried to assure us. And all these self-appointed reformers, when the tide turns, forget the old story of King Canute and imagine that they can sweep it back with a WPA broom. E. V. WILCOX,
Chevy Chase, Md., Nov. 14.

Parliament Of Nations

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There should be no time lost in starting a movement having for its objective the formation of a permanent parliament of the nations of the Western Hemisphere. It will be easier to stop the growth of Hitlerism, to the far south, than to have to drive the Germans out after they have gained a foothold. Already the influence of Hitler in South America is no less than alarming.

We should effect a greater coherence of those states together with Canada and ourselves. The parliament can be patterned somewhat after the League of Nations, but devoting its activities to the promotion of prosperity and security for America. One of its privileges would be the adoption of a united American flag, and the selection of an all-American anthem. Also a united American holiday.

Impelled by high idealism, but fortified by superior air bombs, we can build an impregnable structure of justice and good will among the peoples of the New World, whose foundation can never disintegrate. We can show Hitler that democracy is the cornerstone of civilization, firmer than everlasting hills.

W. WESLEY MILLER.

Bathhouse John

"BATHHOUSE JOHN," born John Coughlin, who sat in the Chicago City Council since the mid-nineties, resplendent in checked suit and apple-green vest, will no longer herald the approach of spring with an "ode" or the coming of summer by donning the season's very first straw hat. The First Ward is sorrowful for it has lost one of the most colorful (and the word is used advisedly!) figures that the Windy City ever produced.

John Coughlin was born around 1880, just in time to see his father's grocery business prospering before the fire of '71 swept it away. John did odd jobs, helped out the family the best he could, and eventually he wound up in a Turkish bath. Hence the name by which he was known from coast to coast. In time, he established his own Turkish bath and there he met the bloods and politicians and financiers who were fashioning a new and lusty Chicago out of the charred embers heaped between the river and the lake.

When Bathhouse John turned his gaze toward politics as a career, he settled on the First Ward, which ran north from the rich business area to a southern boundary which included a red light district which had few equals in the America of the time. Soon Coughlin, the physically larger half of a new political team made up of himself and Michael Kenna (called because of his size "Hinky-Dink"), was a power in city politics. Coughlin and Kenna sat as aldermen of the First Ward and their bailiwick was as certainly Democratic as any Southern State since reconstruction days.

Bathhouse and Hinky Dink remained in the council until 1924 when ward representation was reduced to one alderman. Hinky Dink deferred to his partner, though he himself has been Democratic committeeman ever since he left the council. Now it is rumored that he may take over the vacant chair of his dead partner though the Hink, too, is getting on in years and feels the strain of holding his ward in line in these years of strenuous politics.

Bathhouse liked to be called the "Beau Brummel" of the council. Tall and heavy, with a bristly shock of silver hair, the old leader was known to appear in suits of gray, with black stripes, his favorite green vest, and a stripped cane. In the early days of June, he would be photographed peering into a mirror from which his big face beamed back, surmounted by one of the oddest straw hats this side of an African safari. When he led the famous grand march at First Ward balls, John often wore dark green formal clothes.

He liked to think of himself as the "poet laureate" (sic) of the aldermanic body. Year after year his confused effusions would appear in the public prints; but laughter never disconcerted John. His "Dear Midnight of Love" (which barely made sense) was sung in the Chicago Opera House by a young lady, daughter of a policeman, the evening of her debut. Carter Harrison, in commenting on this effort in his "Stormy Years," so offended the Bath that the two did not speak for many years. They eventually did bury the hatchet, but not until Harrison had felt the sting of First Ward defeats his organization had never known before.

Bathhouse liked racing, and was reputed to have had as many as 60 horses in his string at one time. Several of them ran well, but none ever achieved more than passing fame. They were kept on two farms, one of which was located near Chicago, the other in Colorado. Practically all of Coughlin's horses had been sold before his death.

Neither Bathhouse nor Hinky Dink ever worried much about the strong reform elements which are a feature of Chicago politics. Not so long ago, John received the indorsement of the Municipal Voters League. In consternation he gave an interview to the press in which he declared that the indorsement was the "worst thing that had ever happened to him and he didn't know how he'd live it down in the First Ward." At another time, when his activities were being investigated, he rushed back to Chicago from a vacation in time to deny . . . that he had been born in Waukegan! "Chicago is my home, gentlemen," he is reported to have roared.

Bathhouse and Hinky Dink could have learned nothing from Tammany nor Quay nor Platt nor Pendergast. They took care of the people in the ward, clothed and fed them, got them jobs, buried them, doctored them. And the people of the ward took care of the Bath and the Dink. In the elections of November, 1938, this ward led all others in number of "straight" ballots cast. John was ill and Mike is old, but the ward delivered.

John wanted a band to play at his funeral when he died; Mike saw that he got two. And all the papers, without exception and including those that had denounced the rulers of the old First, wrote half-sad, half-humorous articles mourning the passing of a man who, with all his faults, marked an important link with the Chicago that had known the convention that nominated Lincoln and the Chicago whose towers shine out over the lake like the sentinels of the new pioneering age that came with big business.

Bathhouse John is dead. Only America could have produced him.

PAUL V. MURRAY.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Origin Of Gangsters

MUSSOLINI HAS less right than anybody else in the world except Hitler to point the finger of scorn at the United States as a land of gangsters.

PEGLER

In his book, "Personal History," Jimmy Sheean spoke of being in Venice in the very early days of fascism, living in the premises of a seedy old nobleman who ran a little gambling joint and paid tribute to a gang of young extortioners whom he called Fascisti. The name was meaningless to a stranger then, but the old gambler explained that the Fascisti were young hoodlums who compelled merchants and others to kick in, failing which they would be beaten or killed and their property destroyed.

After that the Fascisti came along to grab control of local governments, then the national government, and presently to employ on behalf of the Italian nation the same psychology and methods—in brief, gangsterism—toward other countries.

Now, to be sure, the extortion system is familiar to Americans. Hoodlums prey on shippers, merchants and others in collusion with minor politicians, and sometimes with the police, and destroy their property, sometimes even kill them, if they do not come through.

But Mussolini didn't get the idea of fascism from our gangsters, nor did they get their idea from him. He and our gangsters got it from Sicily and Naples, where gangsterism, under other names, was a robust institution along toward the end of the last century.

THE MAFIA was a Sicilian organization which routed the regular police and grew so strong that it had the force of government. The poor common people submitted to the Mafia and placed themselves under its protection, and the more aggressive spirits became professional brigands, assassins and extortioners. Travel was dangerous, and the murder rate rose as high as 27 per 100,000. In our land of gangsters a rate of 5 per 100,000 is considered deplorable, and that includes non-negligent manslaughter as well.

The Sicilian Mafia had a code whereby persons who had been wronged, even unto death, considered it ignoble to tell the police authorities, knowing that their comrades would avenge them. J. Edgar Hoover calls this the rat code, but it is really the Mafia code, imported from Sicily. We did have our close-mouthed Hatfields and McCoys, but they were landlocked mountaineers and family feudists, not brigands and extortioners.

ABOUT 1890, in New Orleans, the Mafia got so bad that a citizens' committee broke open the jail and lynched 11 of them for murdering David Hennessy, the chief of police, who had interfered with their gang. This caused international trouble, and this country had to pay Italy $25,000.

Hundreds of thousands of Sicilians were fleeing to the United States to escape the terrible poverty and ignorance in which they were held at home. Most of them were good, hard-working people, but naturally a certain proportion of Mafia terrorists came, too. The innocent immigrants, by training and tradition, were afraid to trust the police, so the Mafia murdered and extorted at will. For a long time they confined their operations to their own frightened countrymen. Later they branched out, and native Americans of various racial strains extended the system to the general public.

WE RECEIVED a branch establishment of the Camorra of Naples in the same way about the same time. The Camorra began as a secret organization in prison, and as the criminals got out they carried on, enlarging their scope. They murdered, robbed and shook down brothel keepers and prostitutes, ran lotteries, terrorized elections, controlled public officials and got so bad that in 1890 the Italian crown suspended the crooked local government of Naples and substituted a royal commission.

The name "gangster" is American, but we got the idea, the method, the psychology and the original cast from Mussolini's own Sicily and Naples. In fact, it has been only a few years since Mussolini himself broke up the Mafia as a nuisance and disgrace to Italy. One mob smashed another, as often happens here.

All this is in the public libraries, written without passion and without challenge and merely as historical fact.

Bureau Head Lauds Fund Drive

Campaign by Volunteers of America to augment the capacity of its Girls' Club and Hospice from 12 to 30 yesterday received the indorsement of Capt. Rhoda Milliken, director of the District Women's Bureau.

John Ruthven, of the First Baptist Church, declared that operation of the Hospice as a refuge for destitute girls and women exemplifies the highest type of practical Christianity, and pledged the interest of his Sunday School class of 200 young women.

Reports were made by Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, Mrs. Acheson Hassan, Mrs. John B. Morrey, Mrs. Albert Lee Rheinstrom, J. B. Hess, and Mrs. Pauline Chambers. Solos were sung by Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass.

Horst Wessel Song

(South Tyrolese version.)

In deepest sleep, the windows thickly curtained,
You pass through the German land of South Tyrol
You, the only hope of your German fellow countrymen,
The last dream of deliverance—good-bye!

Our arms, already raised in greeting, sank,
But not our courage, which always fills our souls,
As we heard that, up there at the Brenner,
That frontier, drawn at St. Germain, must remain.

We will not now or ever admit defeat,
We feel more German now than ever before.
A day will come, after these Roman-German days,
When the red eagle will once more arise!

"Stop This Vandalism"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Please do everything possible to save our cherry trees and the beautiful Basin.

Who has the heart to perpetrate such an outrage to the Nation? I say Nation because those trees are of national celebrity—and the property of every American citizen! If they are destroyed it will be worse than when the British burned the White House. The White House can be replaced—but, not so easily nature!

It's the rankest thing that has ever struck the District of Columbia—a veritable desecration of the beauty of Washington. Jefferson would be the last person in the world (if he were living today) to countenance such a heartless type of memorial erected on site of the wholesale destruction of those cherry trees, that the people of the world have acclaimed by coming here to Washington every spring after spring to see the gorgeous blossoms!

I do not approve of memorials in marble! A cold awe-inspiring spectacle—not commensurate to the humanity so typical of the living Jefferson! Jefferson's deeds are sufficient eulogy to him—and Monticello. The work of his pen stands today far greater than any expressive stone edifices as his memorial—the Declaration of Independence.

Stop this vandalism on the Potomac lest our posterity condemn us! JACK STEARNS GRAY,

A Suggestion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Everyone who read your editorial and also the column November 13 by Gerald G. Gross, on the attempt to substitute a questionable memorial to a truly great man for the very beauty which he himself so steadfastly worshipped and which he spent so large a portion of his life perpetuating, must feel something of the inadequacy of the proposed plan to accomplish that end.

To invite comparison with the Lincoln Memorial would, furthermore, seem in poor taste, as the Pope design falls far short, in the estimation of many, of the grandeur of the former.

May I make a suggestion to the committee: Since it is a matter of erecting a suitable memorial in a suitable location, to the first social democrat in America, Thomas Jefferson, why not be democratic and throw the question open to the Women's Clubs of the United States, and let them decide? It is not too late even now for such action. The steamshovel and concrete mixer can withhold action long enough for that, surely. Or, can they?

ADELAIDE BORAH,
Washington, Nov. 13.

Wants Roosevelt To Act

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Are a few men, apparently too ignorant, too dumb to Washington's rights, to be permitted the slaughter of one of Washington's chief beauties—the cherry trees?

If President Roosevelt be in slightest degree worthy the title of U. S. President, he will stop the massacre! B. LOUDUN.

Ravishing The Parks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Several years ago, spendthrift politicians decided to "remake" Washington parks, just as they were attempting to "make America over." The fact that the public parks had met the approval of everybody for generations did not deter our spendthrift friends, aided and abetted by commercial interests, from proceeding with the devastation.

For inscrutable reasons, rare flower beds were removed from Lafayette Square, while picturesque paths were supplanted with asphalt avenues, suitable for a race between Sea Biscuit and War Admiral, if they decide on another race, but a pain in the eye to the people. At Eighteenth and H the havoc continued when great clusters of lilacs were uprooted in the process of face lifting.

When the metamorphosis was completed what remained vaguely brought Hogan's Flats to mind. The spenders then turned their attention to the quaint little park at Nineteenth and I and proceeded to remove lovely grass plots, substituting a veritable sea of hideous asphalt.

Not satisfied in ruining the public squares, those in power decided to pay further tribute to King Concrete and his commercial cohorts by ravishing Potomac Park and erecting still another "memorial" despite the fact that the people do not want the Japanese cherry and other grand trees molested. Who but concrete mixers and self-seeking politicians want a "memorial" on this particular site anyhow?

Of "proud buildings" Shakespeare truly wrote:

"Time's glory is . . . to ruinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers;
To fill with worm holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things . . .
To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water drops."

E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.
Washington, Nov. 15.

"Please Do Something!"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Please do something about this destruction of the beauty of the Tidal Basin.

No one wants dead marble in place of living trees. Put the memorial elsewhere if we must pay for it now when the money is badly needed to help the living.

Please do something to postpone it until something can be done to stop it.

A. M. KNIFFEN.

"Do Not Let Them Go!"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Who is it wants these grand old trees displaced?
Who is it wants our fair D. C. disgraced?
The men who vote it? Do they really know
How long it takes a cherry tree to grow?
Are there now left no ugly, barren spots?
Can we not find and use less lovely plots
To place our statues tall and grand,
To honor noble men from all the land?

Would Washington, who many times set trees?
Do you think that Jefferson this plan would please?
Jefferson, who planted seedlings everywhere
And watched them grow betimes with loving care?
No. Jefferson himself, if he could say
Just where to set his statue on display,
Would look upon this project with dismay!

The blooms that perfume all our lovely springs,
The blooms that so much pleasure yearly bring,
Do they want parent branches cut and slain?
Or would they have us let the trees remain?
The birds that sing upon the boughs, that rest
Amid the shady leaves beside a nest,
Are saying to us, "Do not let them go!
Oh, save for us this beauty, row on row!"

These trees that live, that bloom, that give us fruit
When threatened with destruction must be mute!
Shall we replace these trees that want to live,
By statue that so little help can give
To birds, to blooms, or even man?
Oh, surely there could be some other plan!

Arlington, Va., Nov. 16.

The Nature Of 'The Thing'

WE ARE WHERE we are today because of an appalling incapacity of many leaders of democratic policy to comprehend the nature of what they are dealing with in nazism.

DOROTHY THOMPSON.

They have acted on the presumption that the national socialist state was a stable and orderly institution and a bulwark against communism.

In this misconception they have been greatly aided by Communist interpreters, who have insisted as presenting nazism as a capitalist plot and a movement of world industrialists to oppress the workers.

It is perfectly true that capitalist leaders in Germany, prior to the Nazi revolution, and in Britain, France, and even in very limited number in the United States to this very day, have aided and abetted nazism and fascism—those forms of totalitarianism that do not call themselves communistic—because of fear. That fear has been engendered by their own impotence to meet new social and labor problems, by their fear of workers, by disorganization caused by hastily devised and badly considered social reforms and by the existence in democracies of revolutionary Communist parties following a line laid down by the leaders in Moscow.

ALSO THERE IS a type among industrialist leaders that has a natural subconscious affinity for what is presented to them as the concept of the Fascist state. The Fascist state, as it is pictured to them, follows a pattern that is familiar and comfortable to them. It is—in the propaganda designed for industrialists—a large, efficient management that does not have to bother with strikes and other labor difficulties and that has easy access to plentiful state credit.

That is why Henry Ford likes naziism, for which sympathy he has recently been decorated by the Nazi state. Naziism, in Mr. Ford's mind, is a Ford factory on a gigantic scale; it has eliminated the private bankers, whom Mr. Ford has always detested; it has gotten rid of the "parasitic" Jews—Mr. Ford has always had a contempt for all middlemen. And it has organized the workers as Mr. Ford would like to see them organized, in brigades, with their physical necessities guaranteed and their cultural and leisure-time activities dictated and supervised.

MR. FORD, like Charles Lindbergh, is in love with the machine. Like Lindbergh, who wrote "We," the companion being an airplane, Mr. Ford is almost a machine himself. Hardness, efficiency, precision are his idols. Whole vast areas of thought and, above all, of emotion are outside his comprehension. If you quoted him Dunsany—that the divine in man is extravagance, benevolence and song—he would not know what you are talking about. Happiness for him consists in running on time.

He is a man of genius, of enormous creative power, but he would never comprehend the creative intellect that demands freedom, room to move in, long periods of laziness, "useless" knowledge, self-renewal through contemplation. He, too, is a product of freedom, but he does not know it. He is a moralist but not a philosopher, and he is without the wisdom of knowledge of the nature of man as manifested through centuries of history.

BUT THE FASCIST state is not Mr. Ford's dream at all. And the object of nazism is not even to establish any such state.

It is actually incapable of stabilizing any social order whatsoever. To be sure, it has thus far followed some such pattern along the plans of its industrial brain-trusters, but these brain-trusters are not naziism. They may be gone tomorrow and something quite different may follow.

Naziism is a revolution. Its object is power. It has no other aim and no other program that is more than temporary. Its initiators and leaders are not industrialists. Its leaders are ruthless, third-rate, psychopathic, declasse formerly unemployed intellectuals and soldiers. It governs by mass support, elicited by mass suggestion and maintained by a combination of propaganda and terror, and it could not last a month if the masses deserted it.

It must conciliate only one force—the masses. It must keep only one force dynamic—the masses. It cannot allow them to settle down quietly. It must keep them aggressive—by working up continual external and internal enemies. It must exploit to the fullest the pleasurable submissiveness of the weak among them and the pleasurable sadism of the brutal among them.

It must have constant victories for them to celebrate—external and internal victories. It must pose as their defender against all the forces of privilege, against the richer nations and the richer classes.

THEREFORE, if its brain-trusters set up Mr. Ford's ideal economy, naziism itself will prey upon it, as a racketeer preys upon business and labor.

It is totally uninterested in the maintenance of private enterprise except as a source of income for itself.

It dares not appeal to kindness, co-operation, reason, common sense, limited possibilities, for these are stabilizing factors, and under stability it could not survive. It must ride the hurricane of a barbarian horde. That is its nature, and it cannot change its nature. It will expropriate the Jews, because it must expropriate somebody. For the state that it controls is financially bankrupt. But it cannot stop the process that has bankrupted it, therefore even that will not be enough. Exactly like a kidnaper, it will hold its helpless victims as hostages and attempt to extort further ransom money for them from world Jewry and world sympathy.

BUT THAT WILL not be enough. It will expropriate the churches, for it must expropriate somebody else. And even that will not be enough. The very moment that it is assured of enough cereals from the newly acquired Danubian basin to feed its people it will expropriate the German junkers, collectivize their farms and expropriate their products.

The colossal, ironic joke of the world is that under the slogan of preserving order and property, the greatest bolshevism in history is under way. I use the word bolshevism exactly as it is meant by most of the people who use it, as the destroyer of property, Christianity and civilization.

Its economic efficiency is a myth. Not only has it bankrupted the German nation but it has lowered the production unit of the average worker. It is rapidly eliminating skill. It is depriving the race of intellectuals and intelligence. It is interrupting the studies of youth to use them in forced labor. It is demoralizing its population and strangling initiative. It is hated and loathed by many of its own agents, who carry on for the sake of Germany.

It is running on the enormous reserve of efficiency which it inherited, and on the unsurpassed quality of the German workers—German, not Nazi. But it is destroying that quality.

ITS LEADERS, with the exception of Hitler, who has an obsession on the subject, are not even anti-Semites. But with the shrewd cunning of dark and barbarian minds they know that they have in anti-Semitism a powerful force for disrupting the order of the rest of the world.

They will cast hundreds of thousands and eventually millions of penniless refugees loose over the earth. They will brand them as Communists and as a menace. They will scare the world into paralysis with this program. They will divide nations on racial grounds, and attack the sovereignty of national states by appeals for racial plebiscites. They will blackmail their allies into similar policies and terrorize their opponents by exacerbating their problems.

BUT CIVILIZATION will win against barbarism — provided. That provision demands, first, that we see what we are up against. Second, that we cement our ranks in passionate solidarity for the things we all agree on, stick, for the time being, to pretty well-tested social and economic policies and regard as treason any attempt to make one American detest another American on racial grounds. Third, that we are thoroughly able to defend ourselves by the armaments that we need, seapower and airplanes. And, fourth, that we equip ourselves with the calm fearlessness born of contempt.

The Silk Road

THE FUTURE OF China depends in large part upon the story told by the great Swedish explorer, Sven Hedin, in "The Silk Road" (Dutton, $5.)

Hedin set out in 1933 as adviser to the Chinese Ministry of Railways, to explore the routes that lead from West China over the mountains and the desert, across the vast territory marked on the maps as Sinkiang, or Chinese Turkestan, toward Russia. Hedin's automobile caravan covered in 1933-'35 close to 10,000 miles, some of it territory that had never before seen a gasoline vehicle. It ran into a civil war, and the members of the party were variously imprisoned; they broke through the ice in the rivers, stuck in the sand, broke springs and axles—and got through. Of those leisurely adventures Sven Hedin here tells, as he told of a part of them in "The Flight of Big Horse" in 1936. What gives his narrative immediate pulsing excitement is the Japanese invasion of China and occupation of the seaports.

For the Chinese armies still resisting Japan from the interior of China there are two—possibly three—practicable sources of supplies. A railroad from French Indo-China touches inner China at Yunnan-fu; thence a precarious route leads across the mountains and down the rushing Yangtze to Chiang Kai-shek's new capital at Chungking; but the Japanese have probably scared the French out of permitting considerable supplies of munitions to follow that route. A new road, just opened but probably still deep in mud and washouts, leads over the mountains from British Burma. And there is the ancient "silk road," which Hedin retraced, leading westward to Soviet Russia's Turkish Railway. It is the most feasible, but its natural terminus in China is Sianfu, now dangerously exposed to Japanese attack. The Chinese have been reported building a new road across the Minshan Range to link this road with Chengtu.

IN AN APPENDIX Dr. Hedin reports events in strife-torn Turkestan since his happy escape from it in 1935. In a footnote at the end of the appendix he reports hearing "from a very reliable Chinese source" last summer that the whole road "from the Russian border at Chuguchak to the coast of the Indian Ocean" was in running order, and that 1,000 trucks were puffing along its Central Asiatic section. If that were true it might be possible to supply Chiang's armies; but I suspect that it is a superlatively optimistic prognostication. A "thousand trucks" sounds well; but a thousand trucks which have to carry with them oil and gasoline for a 2,000-mile journey—perhaps, now that the Chinese connection to the sea is cut, for a 4,000-mile round trip—cannot carry enough ammunition to stop the Japanese. And the "road" those trucks have to travel is, as Dr. Hedin's story makes clear, considerably worse than the sand tracks across our own Navaho country.

Yet for 500 years that was a busy road. The great Han Emperor cleared the route from Sianfu to Tyre, some 6,000 miles, about the time that Jesus walked the streets of Bethlehem, and for half a millenium, with occasional interruptions, Chinese merchants followed their camels along that longest road in the world, carrying the only silk that the Western World then knew "Imperial highway" the Chinese called it; "Silk Road," an apt term is of modern German coinage. The road had been dead for 500 years when Marco Polo retrod it—and told his purple story to unheeding ears; and only a few have followed it within the last half century.

Hedin's adventures are hair raising. But his books—I have read five of them—seem to me impressive justification of the institution of the ghost writer. There is no doubt of their authenticity; Dr. Hedin writes them himself, almost directly transcribing notes from his diaries. The material constitutes one of the great adventure stories of our day. A competent professional writer could, I am convinced, make best sellers of them.

Hopkins' Future

By Ernest K. Lindley

Promotion To Cabinet Post Likely

ONE OF MR. ROOSEVELT'S traits is loyalty to subordinates he feels have been unflinchingly loyal to him.

LINDLEY.

That trait accounts for his failure to reorganize his Cabinet long ago. It is a reason why the injection of new life into that body may be less prompt and thorough than many of his younger associates think is required both by good administration and good politics.

That trait is also a barrier to the success of the currently fierce drive against Harry Hopkins, Tommy Corcoran and other members of the White House circle of intimate advisers. The WPA administrator is the chief target. His critics in the Administration, as well as outside, are making no secret of their belief that his usefulness has ended.

MR. HOPKINS, however, has become not only the President's most influential adviser, but probably his closest friend. Whatever reservations, if any, the President may have about the quality of Hopkins' advice, it will not show up so long as Mr. Hopkins is under heavy fire.

The question in the minds of some of Mr. Hopkins' friends is whether or not the onslaught on him will block or delay the plan to give him another job. Until about six months ago it was expected that he would move into the Cabinet as the first Secretary of Welfare. Then the reorganization bill failed of passage, and the movement to push Robert M. Jackson toward the Presidency via the governorship of New York flopped. With a view to grooming Mr. Hopkins for 1940, inner circle New Dealers began to talk of shifting him to the Secretaryship of Commerce or the Navy. They felt that if he were to be built up as a Presidential candidate he would have to be separated from the WPA spending tag. They felt also that in the Commerce or Navy Departments his true abilities as an executive would become plainer to the public.

THERE WAS NO Cabinet post open six months ago. There isn't now—except the Attorney Generalship, which has been earmarked for Robert H. Jackson. But with reasonable luck the President will have two or three more vacancies to fill within the next few months.

Can Harry Hopkins afford to leave WPA while it is under heavy bombardment and almost sure to be subjected to some kind of Congressional investigation? The answer from the inner circle of the New Deal is, yes. The argument is that since Mr. Hopkins would remain in the Government he would not be running away from an investigation. On the contrary, he would be ready to testify. And in surrendering WPA to another administrator he would be exhibiting his confidence that there is nothing in his record or that of WPA which needs to be concealed.

ON ONE POINT opinion in the New Deal group seems to be in agreement with opinion elsewhere. That is that WPA must be cleansed of all suspicion of "politics." The extent to which it is in politics probably has been exaggerated. Excepting a few States, the primary and election returns this year indicated that the WPA vote cannot be delivered. But that the public suspects the worst is acknowledged in the inner sanctum of the New Deal.

Hence the proposal that WPA be put into "neutral" hands. Robert Moses, New York City park commissioner, has been suggested. Nobody doubts that he would extract from WPA workers the last ounce of value in work done. But, never having been sympathetic to the WPA set-up, and being something of an untamed bronco, Mr. Moses will probably not receive serious consideration. Besides, he has been active in politics from time to time, and the President and he never got along well together.

JOHN D. BIGGERS, Toledo manufacturer, who conducted the unemployment registration a year ago, also has been suggested for the WPA job—as well as for Secretary of Commerce. Mr. Biggers is a Republican. There is talk also of putting an Army engineer in charge.

The appointment of Harry Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce would not please businessmen, but Mr. Hopkins' loyal friends believe that he could quickly overcome prejudices and prove himself to be not only a capable administrator, but a defender of private enterprise. The Navy Department would give him almost as good an opportunity. So would a temporary special post under some such title as co-ordinator of national defense.

Whatever is done about WPA, and with Harry Hopkins, his relation to the President seems to be dynamite-proof.

Frank Roosevelt, the w. k. quarterback, was a victim of the most surprising football play of the season. Herb Lehman won an election which will make him serve four years more as Governor and is wondering whom to blame for this in a year when it was so easy to lose on a Democratic ticket.

Col. Fulgencio Batista, who runs Cuba these days, was a recent White House visitor, bringing back tender memories of the days when disorders in a little country that size could attract attention.

GOVERNMENT GIRL.

Washington, Nov. 18.

If Hollywood were to cast one of its starlets in the role of a girl working in a Washington Government office, probably it would be someone like Gail Page. Of course, the 30,000 girls here run a gamut, all the way from the Loretta Young type to the Zasu Pitts and May Robson types. There are bureaucratic Joan Crawfords and Jean Blondells too; but Gail Page is closer.

Miss Shouse ... fairly typical

* * * *

Or, if you're describing her by ear: She's a lot like the girls hot for a career in the radio broadcasts which housewives listen to at their housework. She's receptive to both marriage and a career, but for the moment freedom from parents, lovers and husbands has the edge.

She wants to be untrammeled more than she wants a career.

* * * *

She comes from 10,000 towns and villages; mostly from comfortable homes on the right side of the tracks; not so luxurious as that of Elizabeth Shouse, daughter of the Liberty Leaguer; but she is fairly typical of her younger colleagues on the Federal payroll, who are more courageous and adventurous than the average girl.

"—four in an apartment"

She goes to work at $100 to $125 a month. If she's on the Hill, political "drag" helped a little; with most of 'em it was the ability to pass an exam not quite so formidable as it seemed. She teams up with another girl to share a $30 furnished room, and after her first raise maybe she takes a whirl at a $50 apartment.

* * * *

Perhaps she'll live for a while dormitory style, four in a small apartment, until it gets on her nerves and she wants more privacy. Probably she got all the dormitory life she wanted at college.

* * * *

She wearies of loitering in the lobby while her roommate entertains a boyfriend . . . She dresses better than the average, but is often in debt for clothes. Her food costs less than $1 a day; in a boarding house she probably eats better than out of a kitchenette.

* * * *

She is not so prim or prudish as she appears . . . Soon she's apt to grow disillusioned about the young men in the same office, and those in other departments seem more glamorous. Somehow she doesn't meet as many diplomats or aviators as she had expected . . .

Occasionally she dripes to Atlantic City or Virginia Beach for a memorable week-end with a group of Government boys and girls.

* * * *

In a rash, expansive mood she's liable to chip in with three other girls on a second-hand car . . . Most of her friends are either from her home State (whom she's met at the State Society dances and picnics) or from the same bureau.

Several times a year she gets homesick, and often after planning a dream cruise to Bermuda she gives it up for the annual trip home.

"—a salaam for the sultan"

Her boss is almost a tin god, and she does quite a bit of salaaming to him. Later this may change to a half exasperated motherliness. She is exceedingly efficient, for the routine of her office is well-grooved. But usually after a year her work has ceased to interest her.

* * * *

Maybe she sheds a quiet tear when the boy back home, who didn't seem quite glamorous enough to marry before a sortie after adventure, marries another girl . . . . The more attractive men she meets here usually are after marrying some girl back home . . . She's tallish, athletic and out-doorsey, but when she walks she soon acquires that loose, languid Washington saunter.

* * * *

Ten to one she'll suddenly realize with a start that if she isn't careful she'll become like the dour spinster in the office who turned down a man in 1921. Then she'll accept the third proposal and put off the marriage until they've saved $1,000 to start housekeeping. After she marries it's likely she'll live much as she would have lived at home, in a five-room cottage or three-room apartment. Maybe she'll always yearn (in low moments) for the old home town.

C. U. Assistant Brings 12,000 Arctic Plants

Father Dutilly Back 3 Months in North Boat Was Icebound

After almost three months in the Arctic, where he collected more than 12,000 plant specimens—many of them full-grown trees approximately 1 inch tall—the Rev. Artheme A. Dutilly is back at Catholic University.

With true scientific caution, he refused yesterday to estimate how many discoveries he had made. "Many of the plants I never saw before; but that does not mean I was discovering. Probably I was rediscovering. Botanists often are. I will have to check with other botanists first."

A few new Arctic willow specimens he is "almost sure" about, however. He is elated, for instance, over his collection of salix Alaskensis. "It has migrated from Alaska. See the woolly covering with which it has covered itself. Plants going into the Arctic from a softer climate seem to always protect themselves with a silk or wool fuzz until they become acclimated," he said.

This was Father Dutilly's sixth trip to the Arctic for botanic research. He makes the trips in summer when supplies are sent up for the Catholic outpost missions. This year, for the first time, the boat in which he sailed with Father Maximilian Duman, graduate botany student at the university, was icebound.

For 13 days it was stuck in the Fox Basin, north of Hudson Bay, caught by strong winds which blew the ice "in the wrong direction." From here, at about the 70th degree latitude the outside world was reached by radio—but there could have been no rescue until the wind changed its course. "We had enough food for the winter and would have used the lumber we happened to have and tried to build a suitable shelter—if the wind hadn't started to blow the other way," Father Dutilly said.

Supplies for the Oblate Mission House at Iglulik could not be delivered and had to be put ashore at Republic Bay, 200 miles from their destination. Father Bazin, who is stationed at the mission, will have to use dog teams to take them up—although they consist of six to seven tons of coal, a ton of food, and other necessities.

The 12,000 specimens will be studied and assorted in laboratories at Catholic University, where Father Dutilly is research assistant. A choice assortment will be sent to the Vatican museum, some will go to the Department of Agriculture, some will stay at the university and others will be exchanged with universities and laboratories in other parts of the world.

In addition to botanical specimens, Father Dutilly brought back Eskimo implements of ivory, bone and stone—materials which they are giving up in preference for manufactured tools sent in by the traders.

Father Dutilly collected his best specimens on long treks across the barrens, where other collecting explorers had not been before. Each year, he said, he is enabled to see things he could not see before—"because I am getting accustomed to the places in which they may be growing. Some of those little things are hard to see."

Protests Besiege ABC Board As Rossiter Seeks License

125 Crowd Hearing 50 Approve Application P.-T.A. Against It

School authorities, church workers, and citizens besieged the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday during a 3-hour public hearing to refuse a Class "C" license to Leo J. Rossiter, proprietor of a seafood establishment in the 4100 block Georgia avenue northwest.

On more than one occasion Board Chairman George W. Offutt warned the counsels for the applicant as well as the attorneys for the citizens objecting that they "please conduct the proceedings 'according to Hoyle'."

Rossiter was refused a similar application two years ago. It would permit him to sell liquor for consumption on the premises.

More than 125 persons crowded into the District Building board room, where the hearing was held.

50 Approve Application

George D. Horning, jr., counsel for Rossiter, presented a petition containing 728 signatures who requested the ABC board to grant the license. The attorney pointed out that the list represented people from the entire city.

In addition, more than 50 persons appeared personally at the hearing to register their request that the board approve the application for a license.

Miss May Bradshaw, principal of Roosevelt High School which she said was in the "vicinity" of the seafood establishment, stated the neighborhood would be made "unfit" should the liquor license be granted.

Dr. Howard B. Safford, principal of Macfarland Junior High School said he had no criticism to make regarding Rossiter's establishment, but he was opposed to the sale of "hard liquor."

"We have a night school as well as a community center at Macfarland," Dr. Safford said, "and you can see that it is not only a matter of children being affected, but of adults."

P.-T. A. Registers Protest

He said the school was about 700 feet from the eating establishment. At this point it was brought out by Horning that Rossiter did not cater to school children during the lunch periods.

Bessie K. Lacy, principal of the Petworth School, told the board that her pupils "play in front of Mr. Rossiter's establishment" and for that reason was opposed to the granting of the license.

A protest from the Roosevelt High School Parent-Teacher Association was registered by Mrs. George P. Barsch, president, in the form of a resolution. She said the organization comprised 400 members and they voted to protest the issuance of a license.

"Furthermore," she said, "we, as parents, could not permit our children to go to the courts to prosecute any licensee if he should sell liquor to minors."

Mrs. Willard Givens, president of the Macfarland Parent-Teacher Association, also presented a petition requesting refusal of a license on the grounds the eating place was "too close to the schools," and the "character of the neighborhood did not warrant" the grant.

"I am not a taxpayer or a property owner but I have the interest of the children at heart and I must protest the issuance of the license," she said.

Customers Feel Put Out

In his own statement of the case, Rossiter said his customers had demanded he obtain a license to sell drinks.

MISS MARY BRADSHAW

"The customers feel put out when I tell them they can't be served drinks," Rossiter stated.

Emmett L. Sheehan, an attorney, appeared in behalf of the restaurateur, and said he had canvassed the immediate neighborhood of the establishment, and that 80 property owners out of 87 had said they would favor a liquor license for Rossiter.

Robert Ellison, public relations expert for many Congressmen, said he had often "visited Rossiter's in the company of Senators and Representatives" and said "we got the best seafood in town there."

"Mr. Rossiter has always kept a very clean and orderly restaurant and I can see no reason why he should not be granted a license," Ellison stated.

George W. Potter, president of the Petworth Citizens Association, presented a resolution adopted by his organization last year, when Rossiter filed an application which was later withdrawn. He said his membership had reaffirmed its former stand on the application and again lodged a protest.

Potter said there were 1,390 members in the organization, but that only 41 were present when the resolution was voted upon.

The Petworth P.-T. A., R. T. Haugh, presented a resolution opposing the granting of a license, which was adopted unanimously by the members present at the last meeting of the body. Haugh was questioned by Attorney Horning if he would make a statement on the character of the establishment.

"I am not a snooper," Haugh said.

Others registering protests were Frank Steelman, pastor of the Petworth M. E. Church, Grant Circle and New Hampshire avenue; Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, pastor of Wallace Memorial Presbyterian Church; Dr. Henry J. Smith, pastor of the Petworth Baptist Church; S. J. McCathran, jr., representing the District Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations; Mrs. Osgrave Nelson, of the Petworth Women's Club; Samuel W. Nash, Epworth League, Petworth M. E. Church; Mrs. Gertrude Northcross, chairman of the library committee of Petworth; Ernest F. Henry, chairman of the referendum and legislative committee, Petworth Citizens' Association, and Mrs. Alvin Lank, of the Women's Guild, M. E. Church.

A decision on the case will be made as soon as the testimony has been reviewed, the board stated.

District Bar Told Pre-Trial Has Merit

'Real Test' Suggested Luhring Is Speaker Time-Saving Stressed

The pre-trial conference is "a gadget we don't know much about but deserves a real test to see what it can accomplish," Justice Oscar R. Luhring of District Court last night told 1,000 lawyers in a special lecture on new rules for civil procedure.

Justice Luhring appealed to his audience in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom to "tell us if you find fault with the new District rules—this isn't a closed corporation drawing them up."

Emphasizing the increased speed and efficiency in the judicial process anticipated from the new procedure, the Justice devoted nearly half his two-hour lecture to the experiment of pre-trial discussion between the court and counsel for both parties, with a view to determining "what facts really are in controversy."

The pre-trial conference, "with good traders" averages only 15 minutes in length in Detroit, Cleveland and other cities where it has been tried, he said. The practice, he reported, diminishes the possibility of perjury by recording testimony while still fresh in the minds of witnesses and cuts days from the length of many trials through elimination of testimony on which there is no important disagreement.

"Three expert witnesses are enough for each side, anyway," he remarked, adding that "when they parade in dozens of witnesses you get so confused you don't know whether you're afoot or on horseback."

The lecture was sponsored by the committee on legal education of the District Bar Association.

Parking Meters Clear to Judge; Fine to Violator

Operation of the new District parking meters is "clear enough to me," Judge John P. McMahon said yesterday in Police Court, imposing a $5 fine on Robert W. Waldron, 22, of the 1000 block of Florida avenue northwest, first person arrested for failure to deposit a coin in one of the contrivances.

Waldron had pleaded he did not understand the workings of the meter.

Judge McMahon told Waldron that there was no excuse for not following directions on the meters. He pointed out that the newspapers had publicized the instructions for a number of days.

Waldron was arrested on Fifteenth street northwest, two days ago, by Policeman W. J. Lynn, of the Traffic Division. He told the officer he did not deposit a nickel in the meter because it showed green from the unused time of another motorist.

Educators Turn to Frivolity As Hopkins Turns Up Late

Famous Ballads Are Made Into Swing WPA Chief Makes Belated Address Says That His Job Has Been 'Unpleasant'

State directors of WPA education and recreation programs, who have taught several million Americans how to put their leisure time to better and more entertaining uses, had a chance to try some of their own medicine last night as they waited 1 hour and 20 minutes for Administrator Harry L. Hopkins to come to address them at the Washington Hotel.

Swingtime singing of old-time favorites and an extemporaneous talk by Dr. L. R. Alderman, national director of the education division, were the methods employed. "We're recreational leaders, aren't we? Let's do some group singing," Virgil Dahl, of the national offices, declared as he arose to brighten the sagging occasion.

"Down by the Old Mill Stream" and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" were the swing numbers. Then—at the suggestion of Miss Ellen Woodward, director of the WPA Woman's Division — "There's a Long, Long Trail" was sung in its ordinary tempo, and Dr. Alderman took over.

Not a Pleasure

"A valiant performance" was what Mrs. Florence B. Kerr, of Chicago, termed his ad libbing when she presented the belated administrator to the joint conference.

After explaining that it was Mrs. Kerr's husband who sent him his Phi Beta Kappa key "20 years after I graduated and I believe that's how a lot of those keys got to swinging across vests," Administrator Hopkins told the State workers that his reaction to the whole WPA program never has been one of pleasure.

"The thoughts I have carried around in my heart for five and a half years have not been pleasant. I have not liked this job, not a bit of it. I have been intrigued at times by the mechanics of it, but always I am brought back to stark reality of the poverty with which it deals.

"Poverty, I have found, has not one redeeming quality. I simply do not believe people grow by suffering. I have seen courage among the poor, yes; but I have seen no one thriving on poverty. The more I see of the whole thing, the less I like it," he declared.

The suffering that goes with poverty has no place in America and can be eliminated, he said. "I belong to the school that belives poverty can wholly be abolished and I belive it's the duty of the Government to put its mind to work to find a way."

Discussed "Utopia"

Persons who laugh about old-age pensions are making him "pretty tired," Hopkins declared, expressing the opinion that "anybody who has thought about it at all knows the day is coming when everyone who reaches the age of 65 will be granted a pension with no prying into the cupboard attached."

"The same thing is coming in regard to care for the sick, the unemployed, and the incompetents," he said.

The recreation and education programs of the WPA will continue to be a force in America for many years to come, according to Hopkins, who termed them a distinct part of the New Deal.

"And make no mistake about that. The New Deal will be here 20 years from now and I still hope to be a part of it. And make no mistake about President Roosevelt, who has done more for America than any other man ever did. He is going to continue to be the influence that keep his party a liberal party," he declared.

Jewish Juniors to Dance

The National Council of Jewish Juniors wil hold its first dance of the season at the Raleigh Hotel tomorrow night. The ballroom is to be converted into a palm grove. Proceeds wil go to philanthropic projects.

Seal Calls On HOLC For Taxes

Repeats Levy Legal City's Power Upheld Agency in Rebuttal Building Is Involved

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal yesterday reaffirmed a previous opinion that the office building of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is subject to the District real estate taxes.

He again advised the District Assessor that the building is taxable under the existing law.

In an HOLC brief filed with the Commissioners, it was maintained the District has not a "local taxing authority" at present, and hence was not in a position to tax the HOLC real property.

According to the exemption clause of the HOLC Act, the corporation is exempt from taxation on its franchise, its capital, reserves and surplus, and its loans and income, but further states that "any real property of the corporation shall be subject to taxation to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed."

However, as the brief points out, the exemption clause refers to the taxing agencies as, "the United States or any District, Territory, dependency, or possession thereof, or by the United States or any District, Territory, State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority."

In addition the HOLC maintains that the clause "was never intended to subject nonproprietary property, such as the office building of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, to Federal taxation in the District."

Seal stated "relief, if any, would be obtained from Congress in the form of an amendment exempting the building."

The District has full authority to collect this tax, he said.

No Problem On Bail Here, Bondsmen Say

"There is no bonding problem in Washington," bondsmen yesterday reported to a special committee investigating the local bail-bond system.

The bondsmen stated in their closed session with the commission appointed by Justice Jesse C. Adkins last July that there have been no cases of unpaid forfeitures in the District "for years."

Bondsmen agreed in principle to a plan for a "ceiling," limiting amount of bonds in relation to assets of the person furnishing the guarantee. Fixing of this limitation will be taken up by the committee in conference with District judges.

Committee members are Col. Charles E. S. Stewart, Clerk of the District Court; Walter F. Bramhall, Clerk of Police Court; William Adkins, Clerk of the Criminal Court, and Harry Underwood, assistant United States Attorney.

Finalists Prepare to Waltz to Glory

Contest Slated for Capitol Stage Monday
Civic Theater Bequeathed Handsome Sets
News and Gossip of the Theater

It seems that the final edict is that we should not "leave the matter lay."

Reference, of course, is made to the zone finals in the waltzing contest inspired by the imminence of the Washington engagement of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "The Great Waltz," referred to in this space a few days ago.

BELL

The preliminaries were decided some weeks ago, but the zone and national finals have, in a manner of speaking, been languishing by the wayside. But not too long. They will be held on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater next Monday night, probably in the vicinity of 9 o'clock. At this time, the winners of the preliminaries held in Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, the Carolinas and the District of Columbia will glide, dip and pirouette in three-four time for the championship of one of the 12 zones that will be involved in the national finals to be held in Madison Square Garden, New York, early in December. Pablo Santana and Martha Benitez, winners of the Capitol's comparatively recent preliminaries, will represent the District next Monday night.

"The Great Waltz," incidentally and repetitiously, will follow Ronald Colman in "If I Were King" on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, as the holiday attraction opening Thursday morning, Thanksgiving Day. Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet and Miliza Korjus are the stars.

Speaking of incoming attractions, immediate or remote, and in response to several requests for information on the matter from lovers of the quaint little book, Walt Disney's cartoonization of "Ferdinand, the Bull" will be presented as an extra added attraction with "Peck's Bad Boy With the Circus," booked to follow Constance Bennett, Vincent Price and Mischa Auer in "Service De Luxe," which opens today at RKO-Keith's Theater.

On Friday, November 25, at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater, the major screen offering will be "Angels With Dirty Faces," in which James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, the "Dead End" kids, Humphrey Bogart, Ann Sheridan and George Bancroft have the leading roles. More of this later, after an early preview screening, hastened by the fact that this is deemed one of the best pictures in which its stars have recently been seen. Opening Thanksgiving Day at the Metropolitan, the attraction will be "Girls' School," with Anne Shirley, Nan Gray and Ralph Bellamy.

Just in case you wish to do your holiday window-shopping a little in advance.

When Katharine Cornell's current production of "Herod and Mariamne" closes its career at the National Theater tomorrow night—as was announced from Buffalo last week would be the case—the handsome scenic production will be bequeathed to the Washington Civic Theater, which richly deserves it and doubtless will put it to good, although fragmentary use in future productions.

This will be the second time the Civic group will have been the beneficiary of professional and managerial largesse through the agency of the National Theater. When Max Gordon closed the road tour of "Pride and Prejudice" here some seasons ago, this column was delegated to inform them that they could have the settings for the modest price of carting them away. They accepted the opportunity as avidly as they have Miss Cornell's generous gesture.

The permanent closing of "Herod and Mariamne" is for many reasons lamentable. It was a handsomely staged and well-acted tragedy which possessed defects in the main attributable to Clemence Dane's inadequate English prose adaptation of a German classic drama written in blank verse. In a long discussion of the play with Dorothy Thompson, The Post's brilliant columnist, upon the occasion of her recent visit to Washington to speak in Constitution Hall in behalf of the Community Chest drive, she expressed the view to this writer that Miss Dane's version of the play which she had witnessed with such rapture in its original text abroad—with Fritz Kortner in his present role of Herod, by the way—and seen again in this country in its present form, did justice neither to Miss Cornell nor to Mr. Kortner. This department's opinion coincided with hers last Monday night.

Christian Friedrich Hebbel, who was born in 1813 and died in 1863—and wrote his blank-verse tragedy of "Herodes und Mariamne" in 1850—necessarily did not write in the mode of the contemporary theater. He sensed the playhouse to be primarily a place of entertainment and illusionment and conceived those purposes to be best served by shaping extravagant dramas, couched in the grandiose dignity of rhythmic speech to match the exaggerated dimensions of heroic scenes. It was this quality of essential flamboyance that was almost totally lacking from Miss Dane's play and so made Mr. Kortner's scholarly European acting seem, to some, bizarre.

Miss Cornell, nevertheless, is to be congratulated once more for having launched a pretentious and a worthy undertaking because she felt it ought to be done.

Harry H. Baker, who occupies himself as president of the Washington Assembly, No. 13, Society of American Magicians, when not serving during the heated term as local manager of the Wilson Line of excursion steamers, sends along a transparently simple recipe for a magical cocktail, in these words:

"One white rabbit placed in a black top hat, add three yards of rainbow-blend China silk, three thimbles, 52 playing cards and a joker, the contents of two hollow eggs, two pinches of whiffle dust and stir well with an ebony wand."

There you have the mystifying concoction that will be served to members of the National Press Club and their families by the local Assembly when they present the "Sixth Annual Evening of Magic" in the main auditorium of the Press Club on Friday evening, December 2. Try it over at home—but preferably not on the piano!

Saturday-Night-on-Main-Street Note

So tomorrow night the Variety Club holds its big annual pow-wow—and, gosh, how they hate it!

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 17.—Antoine, the famous hair stylist, was visiting Claudette Colbert on the "Midnight" set, when he asked if he might rearrange her coiffure. He touched oh, so gently, her bangs when Producer Arthur Hornblow had a call from the union saying that Mr. Antoine was not a member of the Guild, therefore could not continue.

HEDDA HOPPER

Hornblow explained that he was a great artist and was there as a friend. The answer was: "Sorry—as a friend he can sit, but not scissor." So J. W. Robinson, one of the biggest stores, opened their doors Sunday to receive Claudette, Mary Astor and me for Antoine's artistry. Wait till you see us! Antoine promised that on my next trip to Europe he'll introduce me to the master surgeon who does those expert face lifting jobs. Didn't know whether to kiss him or kill him.

All you people who love Elsie Janis will be happy to know that she, together with Edmund Goulding, has written a beautiful song called "Give Me Time For Tenderness," to be sung in "Dark Victory." Incidentally, after seeing a rough cut of this picture, I can tell you Bette Davis will be up for another Academy Award. And George Brent's stock will soar.

The announcement that Lily Pons is retiring to sing lullabies is, to say the least, a little premature. She's concerting in Denver, Chicago, then the Met. Lily would love a baby but being a coloratura is very fearful. Sometimes motherhood ruins that delicate type of voice. Lily, Gladys Swarthout and Bob Miller recently urged Eddie Robinson to give up gangsters and play Beethoven. It takes musicians to see the light.

The Ritz Brothers don't like opera. Al told me, without even blushing, the only words he understood in "Pelleas" were: "They're in my lady's bedchamber."

Fritz Reiner, after conducting "Elektra," flew to Pittsburgh, where he's taking charge of the symphony orchestra. We're missing the opera gang already. They have glamour in large doses but don't know it.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 17.

ENTERPRISE: The Hamilton University Forum invited Erskine Caldwell to lecture at one of the meetings . . . The author of "Tobacco Road" told them to get in touch with his agent in New York to arrange all lecture dates for him . . . A few days later the Forum again wrote to Caldwell advising him that the deal was off. "Sorry to have troubled you," was their message, "but we've hired Carl Sandburg instead. You see—Sandburg plays a banjo with his lecture!"

RESPECT: Harold Laski, the British economist, visited President Roosevelt and discussed last year's Supreme Court battle. "Why did you ever fight with the Supreme Court?" asked Laski . . . "It took 150 years to make the Supreme Court," explained the President. "It seems to me it was worth a three-year fight to make the Supreme Court respect the people of the United States."

FAME: Barbara Bourne, heiress to the Singer Sewing Machine fortune, recently was married to Horton Smith, the golfer . . . One of the bride's elderly aunts, who attended the ceremony, sighed when it was over . . . "Imagine," she said, "spending all that money to educate Barbara, bringing her up to bring distinction to the name of 'Bourne'—and then she marries a man named 'Smith'."

DRUNK: The story now being told in the cafes is of a drunk who emerged from the Plaza and told the cab driver: "Drive me aroun' Chentral Park a hundred timesh" . . . The startled driver proceeded to obey . . . After encircling the park five times the drunk tapped the window to attract the driver's attention . . . "Come on, fashter, fashter," he ordered, "I'm in a hurry."

WAR: During the war-scare in London, H. G. Wells was asked what he would do in the event of an air-raid . . . "I'd do one thing," he replied. "I'd send out invitation cards to a party. And in the lower left-hand corner of the cards would be the word 'Looting'."

AGE: Libby Holman visited the 62-year-old Cissie Loftus yesterday. "Cissie," asked Libby, "at your age, why don't you retire?" . . . Miss Loftus fumbled through her purse and produced a newspaper clipping concerning a Marie Loftus, who had sung last month at a church social in Glasgow . . . "Your sister?" asked Miss Holman . . . "No," replied Miss Loftus. "My mother."

CHATTER: Jimmy Walker will introduce Mayor LaGuardia at Madison Square Garden . . . Clifford Odets will be front-covered by Time magazine next month . . . District Attorney Dewey has been unable to get a room in the Supreme Court building for the retrial of the Hines case . . . The New York nightclub owners will organize this week to regulate the nudity in their own cafes . . . The indictment of that local politician—for subornation of perjury—is expected this week . . . The International Casino is shuffling its officials . . . Andre Malraux, author of the best-seller, "Man's Hope," now is in Barcelona, making a screen version of that book.

SCARE: Irving Berlin went to London during the international crisis to settle some disptes about "Alexander's Ragtime Band" . . . On the third day at sea Berlin received a ship-to-shore telephone call from a London newspaper. "We called to get your opinion about the current war?" asked the reporter . . . "The war?" replied Berlin, shocked. "What war?" . . . THE War," answered the newspaperman. "THE War—between Jazz and Symphony."

WEATHER: Ever since Col. Batista, the Cuban dictator, arrived here he has been photographed wearing civilian clothes . . . This, however, is not due to the lack of uniforms brought here by the leader of Cuba's army. He bought the civilian suits here—because, in uniform, he was cold.

More than 27 races from all over the world were represented among the 95 players in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest miniature, "Father Damien."

Making Up Time

More than 800 hours have been spent on make-up tests for "Juarez" to date.

Star Plays Tennis

Franciska Gaal is using most of her spare time taking tennis lessons at the West Side Tennis Club.

Star's Mother Has Own Clipping Plan

Hollywood's most extensive private clipping service is being operated today by Mrs. L. C. Fitzpatrick, mother of Gail Patrick.

Newspaper clippings by the hundreds have been pouring in ever since Miss Patrick started work in "Disbarred" as a result of the organization of volunteers set up by the star's mother.

In scores of cities scattered all over the United States friends of Mrs. Fitzpatrick scan the local papers avidly every day, clip out every article mentioning Miss Patrick and mail them to the star's mother, who puts them into scrapbooks.

'Suez' Takes Its Stand At Columbia

Tyrone Power Starred Mammoth Production Is Repeat Engagement

With a vividly realistic reproduction of a raging desert simoon and an equally authentic depiction of the dynamiting of a mountainside to mark the destructive high spots of its action, the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Suez" yesterday took possession of the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater for a repeat engagement on F street.

These tempestuous points in its development, however, are not the only aspects of the picture that command attention. "Suez" has been produced on a gigantic scale and into it have been packed a great measure of interesting incident, diversity of scene and skill in character portrayal.

The story, needless to say, deals with the events preceding, during and following the building of the Suez Canal as the strategical connecting link between the Mediterranean and Red Seas. Its pivotal figures are Ferdinand de Lesseps, the Countess Eugenie de Montijo—later the Empress Eugenie of the Second Empire—and a sort of desert Cigarette, who attached herself to the statesman-dreamer and refused to be parted from him by anything but death. Surrounding these central characters are the rulers and diplomats of three nations and an army of lesser figures.

Is Rousingly Played

In the role of De Lesseps, seen first as a promising young underling of the French diplomatic corps in Egypt and later as an intimate of the courts of both France and England, Tyrone Power creates an immediate impression of being too young for complete conviction in the role, but, even so, offers the most animated and most diversified performance he ever has brought to the screen. Loretta Young, as Eugenie, is bewitchingly beautiful, and, in so being, fulfills the major demand of her part. Annabella appears as the desert waif and also turns in the best portrayal she ever has contributed to the American cinema.

In the supporting roles of greatest importance, such admirable players as Henry Stephenson, Nigel Bruce, Miles Mander, J. Edward Bromberg, Maurice Moscovich, Leon Ames, Sig Rumann, George Zucco and numberless others maintain the uniformly high excellence that characterizes the picture.

Photographed on sepia-tinted film, "Suez" is a constant delight to the eye. It is supplemented by the usual short subjects and a new issue of the News of the Day.

Metropolitan

Demonstrating its right to claim a place among the most buoyant screen comedies of the current season, the Warner Brothers' picturization of George Abbott's successful stage play, "Brother Rat," today inaugurates the second week of its repeat engagement at the Metropolitan Theater.

"Brother Rat," although there are, necessarily, adult characters in it, is completely dominated by the effervescent spirit of youth. Dealing with undergraduate life at the Virginia Military Institute, and filmed in large part on the V. M. I. grounds at Lexington, Va., this sprightly piece devotes itself to the romances, martial adventures and pranks of the student body, overwhelmed by the compounded interests of a crucial baseball game, spring assembly, the secret fatherhood of the star pitcher and the disciplinary business of "penalty tours" right up to the time of final exams. Enough to shatter the nerves and break down the sturdiest constitutions. Only it does no such thing.

Whether the comedy is as well played on the screen as it was on the stage is beside the present point—which is that it is sufficiently well played in its present manifestation to keep an audience in constant good nature and frequently in stitches.

The foremost roles are played by Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane—less importantly cast than she was in "Four Daughters"—Johnny Davis, William Tracey, Jane Bryan, Jane Wyman, Henry N'Neill and scads of others. The best portrayal in the film is contributed by Eddie Albert, taken over from the original stage company. Mr. Albert is as much a "natural" for the part in celluloid as he was behind the footlights. As the expectant father of a secret baby and star pitcher, rolled into one, he is perfect. The others are not all that good, but they are good enough for all practical purposes.

The short subjects, supplementing the feature, also are continued, with the composite newsreel, of course, brought up-to-date.

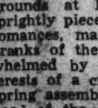
CHILDREN'S Frequent COLDS



If your children keep coming down with nasty little colds all winter, use Vicks VapoRub these three simple ways.

✓ For relieving discomforts of chest colds and night coughs, rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back at bedtime. VapoRub's poultice-vapor action relieves local congestion—eases muscular soreness or tightness—helps the youngster relax into restful sleep.

✓ For coughing and irritated throat caused by colds, put VapoRub on the child's tongue. It melts, trickles slowly down—bathes the throat with soothing medication. Then massage VapoRub on throat and chest.

✓ For "stuffies" and misery of head colds, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water. Have the child breathe in the steaming vapors. This loosens phlegm, clears air-passages, makes breathing easier. Also massage VapoRub on throat and chest. Millions of families use these three time-tested ways to relieve the misery of colds.

'Sane Conservatism' Is Urged In Address by Bishop Freeman

Bishop James E. Freeman, of Washington, addressing the annual convention of the American Bankers' Association yesterday at Houston, Tex., declared that foreign experiments in government constituted a challenge to business leaders in this country to put their house in order.

He urged adoption of an attitude of "sane conservatism," declaring that "in our future planning we cannot be reactionary or pursue policies that are born of excessive conservatism."

"We have suffered a serious setback," he said, "and along with it we face a world that is wrestling with experiments of one kind and another foreign to our conception of orderly government.

"With such a situation confronting us, we dare not delay putting our house in order according to ways and practices that are consistent with American ideals.

"Our State and Federal legislative programs furnish evidence that we are still in a state of mental incompetence. There is little long-range planning, with the result that we are in a perpetual state of insecurity.

"I solemnly believe that we are where we are and where we shall continue to be from a lack of wise planning. The currents of life have moved too swiftly for us. We have grown flabby.

"The remedies we have applied here in America have proved less effective than those used in other countries."

Dr. Freeman declared that "youth, in particular, is getting an exaggerated conception of what constitutes values," adding: "There is no element in our corporate life more worthy of our intelligent sympathy than youth, for ultimately upon them must fall the penalty for much of our stupid blundering.

"Another ominous phase of our life is the growing spirit of hate and intolerance." The spectacle of Nazi Germany's persecution of Jews and indignities to Catholics "are the sure precursors of cleavages that will issue in war and disaster."

South Africa Minister Welcomed in Berlin

Berlin, Nov. 17 (AP).—Defense Minister Oswald Pirow, of the Union of South Africa was greeted by high Nazi officials on his arrival today for a visit which Germany hoped would lead to a better understanding of her colonial claims.

He was welcomed to the Reich by Col. Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of th ehigh command of the armed forces, representing the war office, and by Economics Minister Walther Funk.

Chamberlain Seeks British Refugee Haven

Mentions Tanganyika $150,000,000 Needed Expected From U. S.

By Joseph Driscoll.

London, Nov. 17.—Prime Minister Chamberlain, questioned today as to what he is trying to do to help the persecuted Jews of Germany, disclosed he already has taken preliminary steps toward finding them a home in a number of British colonies, including Tanganyika, one of the former German colonies, held under League of Nations mandate by the British.

United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy on Tuesday laid before Chamberlain a plan to remove Jews from Germany to North and South America and to parts of the British, French and Netherlands empires. The cabinet considered the plan yesterday.

However, Chamberlain did not name other prospective settling places for Jews, but it is understood African territories under consideration include Northern Rhodesia and Uganda, which are British; the Cameroons, which are shared under a mandate with France, and the island of Madagascar, which is a French possession.

In South America Jews may be settled in Brazil, Chile and British Guiana.

In North America, Canada is the chief hope for resettlement purposes. From the United States, the assistance is expected to take the form of $150,000,000 or so, required to transport and establish Jewish immigrants in overseas homes.

Australia and New Zealand are other possible sanctuaries for German refugees.

Chamberlain will deliver a further statement Monday night in the course of a Commons debate on a Labor Party motion deploring the persecution of racial, religious and political minorities in Europe, and urging Britain to join the United States and other nations in a common policy to solve the refugee problem.

The question of Jewish immigration will come up again next Thursday in a debate on Palestine.

Chamberlain told the Commons today that the problem of immigration from Germany was being studied by the Evian Conference Committee. The American member of the committee is Mryon C. Taylor.

Although nothing was said about this today, it is understood Taylor has expressed confidence he can raise $150,000,000 among American Jews and Gentile sympathizers, providing the British government finds enough land in Africa and the Americas to make possible wholesale resettlement.

[The Jewish Agency of Palestine approved a budget of £1,000,000 (about $5,000,000) for Jewish settlement in Palestine and decided to earmark a special fund for the placement of refugees from Germany, the Associated Press said.]

[Climaxing a debate in which Winston Churchill and Sir Alfred Duff Cooper derided present rearmament efforts, the House of Commons tonight gave an indirect vote of support, 321 to 130, to the Chamberlain government on the defense issue, the United Press said.

[The vote came in defeating a Liberal amendment regretting that the King's speech had failed to mention creation of a ministry of supply—held by the opposition to be a vital need in defense plans. The King's speech then was approved without a record vote.—Editor's note.]

Labor Wins Election

London, Nov. 17 (AP).—John Morgan (Labor), won the Doncaster seat in the House of Commons today, defeating Alexander Monteith (National Liberal), 31,735 votes, to 20,027, in a bye-election.

The Labor Party increased by nearly 4,000 votes the majority it gained in the district in the 1935 general election.

Harnett, Accused By Dewey, Resigns New York Post

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 17 (AP).—State Tax Commissioner Mark Graves today announced the resignation of State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Charles A. Harnett, who is under indictment in New York City on charges of bribery and extortion.

The resignation was announced after Harnett had conferred with Graves. Harnett reiterated he was "absolutely innocent" of the offenses with which he is charged.

Harnett was charged with accepting $67,000 in bribes from taxicab companies. He had held his $10,000-a-year post since it was created in 1924, and was the eleventh man arrested in District Attorney Dewey's year-long investigation of the taxicab industry.

Idiots Cured By Hormone Treatments

Cases Formerly Hopeless Results Are Surprising Explained to Doctors

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, Nov. 17.—Hormone treatments which restore the minds and bodies of many subnormal children were reported today to the Southern Medical Association.

These children oftentimes are idiots or have very low intelligence and have malformed bodies due to the failure of their pituitary or thyroid glands to function properly and secrete the hormones necessary for normal growth, Dr. Henry H. Turner, of Oklahoma City, said.

Most such cases previously were regarded as hopeless, he added, but the treatments, which consist of merely injecting the proper substance into the body in small doses, gives hope of brightening the lives of hundreds of children and their families.

As one example of the power of the treatment, he described a 4-year-old girl who resembled a child 1-year of age and was unable to walk or talk. After thyroid hormone was administered she gained nine inches in stature, five pounds in weight, and practically normal mentally within a year.

In another case a 10-year-old boy was stunted by lack of both pituitary and thyroid hormones and was only 40 inches tall and weighed 34 pounds. During the 18 months hormones were administered he doubled his weight and gained a foot in height.

Lack of vitamin D and calcium were said by Dr. Harold T. Nesbit, of Dallas, Tex., to be responsible to a large degree for the irritableness of "problem" children. He urged the feeding of calcium in a readily assimilable form and sleep-inducing tablets when necessary to quiet a child and carry him through his nervous period.

He was recalled to active duty during the World War and commanded the 34th Infantry which was stationed on the Mexican border.

Col. Howell is survived by two daughters, Mrs. T. N. Horn, of New York City, and Miss Lida Howell, of Keokuk, Iowa.

Lorton Forwards 'Model' Fugitive Form for Pardon

A pardon application yesterday was forwarded by the Justice Department to Dewey L. Roush, who escaped from the Lorton Reformatory 13 years ago to become a model citizen in Wisconsin.

Neighbors and organizations petitioned for his pardon after his whereabouts was discovered in October by L. J. Green of the District Jail's identification bureau. When he escaped from Lorton, Roush left his bonus certificate behind. By checking with the records, Green learned that he had later applied for a duplicate and received his bonus money at a Marinette, Wis., address.

Roush was rearrested and is now in a Milwaukee County Jail. He was sentenced to three years for an automobile theft and completed 20 months of his term. He served 16 months in the Army during the World War and friends said he had never been involved in any trouble except that for which he was convicted.

"I have gone straight since I escaped," he declared when seeking a pardon. "I have operated a 40-acre farm and supported my wife and mother."

U. S. Will Spend $3,500,000 on Bay Waterways

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Government will spend approximately $3,500,000 during the current fiscal year in new and maintenance work in Chesapeake Bay's strategic waterways, records of the Army engineers showed today.

The figure does not include the cost of work in progress or contemplated in the Potomac and James Rivers, major tributaries of the bay.

Expenditures in the first three months of the fiscal year totaled $661,500. Most of that spent to date was $510,000 applied to maintenance dredging on the 27-foot sealevel canal connecting the Delaware and Chesapeake Bays.

Of a total of $288,000 made available for dredging in Norfolk Harbor, $44,500 had been spent up to October.

Numbers Slips, Liquor, 3 Men Seized in Raids

Members of the vice squad, led by Sergt. George Deyoe, yesterday arrested three colored men and confiscated numbers slips and liquor in two raids.

Howard Davis, 29, and John Graves were charged with operating a lottery, possession of numbers slips and selling liquor without a license, after police broke into their home in the 1400 block of Ninth street northwest. Davis and Graves pleaded guilty and were held under $1,500 bond.

John Albert Boone, 39, arrested in a store in the 1300 block of Ninth street northwest, was charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips. He was held under $1,500 bond.

Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo and the National Symphony Orchestra collaborate Thursday night in the presentation in Constitution Hall of Marius Petipa's "Lebedinoie Ozero," with music by Chaikovski; Leonid Miassin's "Nobilissima Visione," with music by Paul Hindemith, and Miassin's "Le Beau Danube," to music by Johann Strauss, the younger. Conductors, Efrem Kurtz and Anatol Fistoulari.

Of major interest in last evening's joint offering by the Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo and the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall was the new choreographic lebend, "Noblissima Visione," in which the talents of Leonid Miassin and Paul Hindemith worked together with remarkable consentience. That since the premiere of this work in London last July the title has been curtly changed to "St. Francis" is regrettable for several reasons, of which the most cogent is that the Roman Catholic Church has canonized three saints of that name: St. Francis of Assissi, of Paloa, and of Sales. The moment that the action begins to unfold on the stage, there is, of course, no doubt that the protagonist is young Francesco Bernardone, who forsook the pleasures of the world for a mystical marriage with Lady Poverty.

"Nobilissma Visione" is the inevitably right title, for it not only expresses the underlying theme but also subtly conveys the antiquarian atmosphere of the miming and costuming. This combined product of dancer and composer has as its most striking attribute an almost flawless unity. The visual and aural elements are so aptly blended that they become virtually one, and the union is indissoluble both in entirety and in detail. Both choreography and music are highly stylized, the former in Byzantine patterns and the latter in mediaeval harmonies.

The scenario, said to have been inspired by "The Little Flowers of St. Francis," sets forth the conversion and subsequent beatification of the zestful and merrymaking youth of Assisi. Francis appears first in the home of his father, concerned only with gauds and baubles; then successively as a soldier in quest of adventure, a roisterer with gay companions, an outcast because of his sudden sympathy with the poor, a beggared recluse, and ultimately as a purified spirit rapt in communion with the divine.

The impressiveness of the scenes art of the period. The stiffness and angularity of the miming, relaxed regularity of the miming, relaxed occasionally for purposes of speeding the movement, come form the paintings which he has contemplated, as do some of the plastic color combinations in the costumes. His characterization of the role is in a similar key, consistent in every pose and facial expression. The groupings are admirable, and there are several solo passages of singular rhythmic beauty.

Paul Hindemith has written into his score a corresponding mediaevalism, and in doing so has composed a work attractive through its own virtues. The thematic basis is a troubadour song, 'Se fut en Mai," with a naive melody which is subjected to many variations and welded with other material of archaic nature. Modern harmonization is used freely, but in so spare and direct a manner as to interfere in no way with suggestion of primitive modes.

Stuffings Of Turkey Need Starch

Base Is Required
Recipes for Fillings
101 Ways to Season
Thanksgiving Hints

By Alice Clayton.
The Post Food Editor.

IN THE MOST Southern sections of Dixie, the term "dressing" denotes a heritage more important than merely putting on one's clothes. A "dressing" describes the corn meal or potato stuffing which fills a turkey, chicken, quail or any fancy bird. In old New England squires called their dressing a "filling," which also had its descriptive points, for these sage and sausage dressings filled, nay burst, from native ducks and turkeys.

Washington housewives may call their Thanksgiving dressings either stuffings or fillings. These turkey paddings are sure to be seasonable and appetizing, however, regardless of their origin.

You Can Have Only One

There is only one problem which arises over turkey stuffings. That is the question, "Which stuffing shall I prepare this year?" Despite sister Sue's fondness for oyster stuffing, despite cousin Martha's way with corn meal dressing, despite your own favoritism for a plain onion filling, this is certain—your Thanksgiving bird can only be stuffed once. Therefore the tempting filling recipes and suggestions which follow may be of assistance to you in making your memorable selection this year. They are provided by the United States Bureau of Home Economics, which summarizes the turkey dressing situation thus:

"Although no two birds may be stuffed by exactly the same recipe, all poultry and meat stuffings are built on the same general pattern. First, there is a starchy base. Usually it is bread or cracker crumbs of various kinds—white, brown, or corn bread. Flaky, boiled rice, and well-seasoned mashed potatoes, are also popular. Second, melted butter, or some other good-flavored fat, is added for richness.

Seasoning Possibilities

"Then comes the seasoning, with its 101 possibilities. To the venturesome cook, stuffing seasonings furnish one of the year's most promising opportunities. Her selection lies first among the many herbs, then seasoning vegetables, and other interesting additions—mushrooms, dried apricots, prunes, or raisins, candied cranberries, sausage, diced salt pork, and tart apple cubes—to mention but a few.

"For the perfect bread stuffing, first look to the quality of the bread crumbs. Use bread two or three days old. Cut each loaf in two and 'fork' out the inside, leaving the crusts. Crusts may be handy for other dishes later, but their hard, brown lumps ruin the texture of stuffing.

"After 'forking' out the pieces of bread, continue to pick the larger ones apart with the tips of the fingers until all crumbs are fine and even in size. Fineness is less important for a moist than for a dry stuffing, but it always makes for a complete blend of flavors.

"For every pound of a bird that weighs less than 10 pounds use a cup of bread crumbs, minus one. For a bird weighing 10 pounds or more use a cup of crumbs per pound of bird, minus two.

"Count the weight of the bird as you buy it in the market 'dressed,' that is plucked, but not drawn, and with the head and feet attached. Thus for a 4-pound bird, whether chicken, duck, or guinea hen, you will need three cups of crumbs. For a 8-pound bird, allow 4 cups; and for a 12-pound turkey or goose, 10 cups of bread crumbs should be enough. Usually a one-pound loaf of bread makes about one quart of medium-dry bread crumbs.

Chop Fine, Fry in Fat

"Seasoning vegetables—celery, parsley and onions—have a better flavor if chopped fine and fried in fat for a few minutes. Try out some of the fat from the bird, if there is any to spare. Or sometimes enough fat comes in the bits of crisp salt pork, bacon, or sausage added to the stuffing.

"If possible fry the seasoning vegetables in a skillet or pan large enough to hold bread crumbs and all. Then the stuffing can go into the bird piping hot. Putting the stuffing hot into the bird speeds up the roasting and improves flavor. But if your time plan calls for stuffing the turkey on the day before the big feast, keep the stuffing cool and the bird well chilled. If held overnight the turkey will absorb some of the flavor of the stuffing, sometimes a decided disadvantage."

Preview of Stuffed Bird

It's a wise wife who knows her own husband's carving ability. Even more sage is the housewife who treats her family to an advance showing, and eating, of a temptingly stuffed fowl. The turkey, above, is plump, full of parsley, celery, onion and spiced dressing

Here are two simple stuffings which will appeal to housewives from all sections of the country.

Raisin and Apple Stuffing

Combine 2 cups of seeded raisins, 2 cups of finely chopped sour apples, 3 cups of stale bread crumbs, 1 tablespoon of salt, ½ teaspoon of cinnamon, a dash of pepper and enough water to moisten to taste. Toss them all together lightly and add additional seasonings to taste. Any favorite nut may be added to this dressing.

Oyster Stuffing

Place 4 cups of stale bread cut in ½-inch cubes in a mixing bowl; toss lightly with a fork while adding the remaining ingredients in the order given; 2-3 cup of melted fat, 3 tablespoons of salt, 1 teaspoon of pepper, ½ cup of finely cut celery, 1 chopped onion and ¼ cup of heated oyster liquor. This mixture is sufficient for an 8-pound turkey.

Sauce Recipes Sought in New Post Contest

At least one contest follower will be gratified to learn of the theme for the new recipe contest. She is Mrs. Barbara Lipscomb, 20 H street northeast, who for many weeks has been suggesting that sauces might serve as contest material. Due to pre-holiday preparations in many local kitchens of nut and pudding contest dishes, this is the first opportunity for sauces to pour into the contest limelight.

Mrs. Lipscomb desires the new competition to evolve around sauces, either hot or cold, which can be used to disguise left-over meats, vegetables, fruits and fish. Practical, usable sauces is her request, for as she remarks, "A housewife can never have a wide enough variety of sauces, as they stretch a meal better than any food I know of." Of interest to cooks with left-over turkey trimmings and roasts next Thursday will be this sauce contest, for variety of service can revive even a jaded holiday appetite.

Any type of sauce recipe is eligible for this contest. Mail all entries to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor. All recipes must be neatly written, kitchen tested and received by the editor, not nater than November 26. Prizes include, first, $3; second $2, and three additional prizes of $1 each.

Try Cheese Garnishes.

'Frost on Pumpkin' No Aid to Flavor

Don't worry because the pumpkins' goodness has not been touched by frost. There is more sentiment than science in James Whitcomb Riley's frosted pumpkin idea.

Actually, frost does nothing to enrich the big gourd's flavor and it greatly injuries its keeping qualities. The best pumpkin is neither the giant nor the dwarf of the pile. The largest may lack sweetness, the smallest be immature. Choose one of middling size and always of bright color.

Market Is Lush With Produce Of Late Fall

Vegetables Abundant
Fruits Colorful
Turkeys Are Ready

CONTINUED warm weather so late in November has created more than a mere flurry back to fall tweeds, instead of toward fur coats. It has been a blessing to fruit and vegetable lovers. Production throughout the countryside has been maintained so that market prices are low enough for even penny-pinching housewives.

Foremost among harvest vegetables, which look and taste like holiday treats, are plump cauliflowers, for 10 or 15 cents a head. Spinach, artichokes, Brussel sprouts and mushrooms are also beautiful to look at and to serve. Carrots, sweet potatoes and squash are yearning to be made into pones, souffles or pies, at a price.

As usual the wise marketers are withholding their prize turkeys until next week when there will be a great flurry toward these haughty birds. Few Thanksgiving fowls are being displayed until the call of these wild birds is so strong in holiday bosoms that buyers cannot resist ordering Thanksgiving entrees from their favorite dealer. A hint to the wise. Even though turkeys are plentiful in yards all over the country, order now so that there will be no chance of not serving the very biggest and best fowl that your heart can desire.

Cranberries are vividly present all over Washington. Persimmons, apples, grapes, pears, oranges, lemons, grapefruit and pumpkins argument the colorful market scene. A fascinating importation to grace table centerpieces is the love apple which is as brilliant as a Van Gogh painting and as unusual as well. Chestnuts, pecans, walnuts, oysters and shrimps are patiently waiting to fill your Thanksgiving bird.

Consumers Counsel

Advice on Food

OF PARTICULAR interest to thrifty housewives, who desire information on the preparation and marketing of home-made fruit cakes, is the discussion published today by Consumers Counsel. If problems of earning extra money to help with a child's education or toward buying shoes are confronting you, the following questions and answers will be of value. The Counsel will assist in ironing out daily homemaking problems. Address queries and suggestions to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor.

A reader in Waynesboro, Va., whose name has been omitted, writes as follows:

"I enjoy your pages so much and recall your invitation to readers who wish to receive advice on their food problems. My problem is how I may help with the family budget, which is sorely in need of replenishment. I've decided to take orders for fruit cake if I can get them. I have a splendid recipe for fruit cake, but if you have an inexpensive one, will you publish it? I have also a delicious recipe for mincemeat, said to have descended from the Custis family. Which, do you think would sell better, the mincemeat dish or the fruit cake?

Fruit-Cake Problem

Fruit cakes make as salable and attractive a product for home distribution as any food but, of course, these cakes should be made well in advance of the Christmas season. If already maturing and mellowing, these Virginia delicacies should have a market in this vicinity if exhibited and shipped at once.

Actual preparation of fruit and nuts, wax papering the pans and storage of the cakes is probably well enough known to call for no additional advice on this matter. A recipe for very palatable Dundee cake, however, follows. This cake keeps for several weeks and is far less expensive than dark fruit cakes.

DUNDEE CAKE

(a light fruit cake; 1 large loaf or 2 small loaves)

1 cup seedless raisins
1 cup sliced candied citron
1 cup sliced candied orange peel
½ cup sliced candied pineapple
½ cup sliced candied cherries
2 cups all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ cup butter or oleomargarine
1 cup sugar
3 eggs, beaten
¼ cup orange juice
Grated rind of ½ orange

Place the fruits in a mixing bowl. Sift the flour, salt and baking powder over the peels; mix with the fingertips until the pieces of fruit are coated with flour. Cream the butter; add the sugar gradually; add the beaten eggs and the orange rind. Stir in the flour and fruit mixture alternately with the orange juice. Fill one or more greased and paper-lined pans three-fourths full of the batter. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees to 350 degrees F.) for 1 to 1½ hours according to the size of the loaves. The cake may be decorated shortly before it is removed from the oven by brushing with slightly beaten egg white and arranging bits of candied fruit and halved nuts in a conventional design.

Mince meat is at best a rather troublesome product to package, so the glaced nut and fruit syrup recipe might serve as an alternate product to market along with fruit cake orders. Fruit cake should bring at least 60 or 75 cents a pound if any profit is to be made.

New Nut Recipes Run the Gamut From Soup to Pies

Casserole Is Winner Baking Ideas Given Entree Suggested

NUT RECIPES from many sections of the country were received in The Post's contest of last week. Not only were the peanut growing areas of Virginia and the Carolinas represented but pecan recipes and black walnut dishes from Georgia and Louisiana were among the entries.

One entry came from Ruth Stocks, of Atlanta, who wrote out ten pages of recipes for the use of her natively venerated pecan and filbert nuts. Although this "shut-in," as Miss Stocks describes herself, failed to win a cash award this time, her patience and true Southern fondness for fine foods may stand her in better stead another week.

Nut pies, cakes, bread and rolls also proved popular. Candy took many nutty guises, as honey almond brittle, black walnut balls, chocolate and English walnut fudge and several peanut brittle recipes. Of obvious favor in many local homes were formulas for vegetable nut turkey, nut chops and Brazil nut souffles.

Maryland Winner

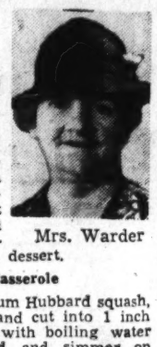
First award of $3.00 goes to Mrs. E. S. Warder, of Breezie Point, Md., Abell post office. Her squash, pecan and fruit entree is well aimed at this holiday season of festive color and appetite. It becomes doubly exhilarating, when as Mrs. Warder suggests, it is converted into a meringue topped dessert.



Mrs. Warder

Nut Squash Casserole

Pare 1 medium Hubbard squash, remove seed and cut into 1 inch cubes. Cover with boiling water slightly salted and simmer on slow fire until tender. Drain, being careful not to break cubes, arrange in well greased pan, sprinkle with 2-3 cup broken pecan meats and ½ cup seedless raisins. Melt ⅛ pound butter in heavy iron skillet, add 1 cup brown sugar, small glass apple jelly, water and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon mace, stirring until thoroughly blended. Pour over squash cubes and bake in medium oven 15 minutes. Serve on warm platter surrounded with 4 pineapple slices halved which have been lightly browned in butter. Garnish with stripes of preserved ginger and whole halves of pecan nuts.

Among the many appetizing nut dishes entered in last week's recipe contest few were more seasonable and attractive than the nut pumpkin pie, illustrated, above. The custard, spicy with cloves, ginger and pecans, vies with the garnish of blanched almonds

Baking Suggestions

Second prize of $2 is won by Mrs. Ernest L. Andes, 1412 Chapin street northwest. Among the appetizing recipes Mrs. Andes entered in this weeks' competition were turkey and bacon stuffings and hors d'oeuvres surrounding the meaty Brazil nut. All of her recipes found favor with the contest judges, but her formula for spicing mixed nuts proved of undeniable appeal. Her method of flavoring them, then coating with white of egg and baking places these nuts in the dessert class.

Mrs. Andes

Spiced Nuts

Mix 1 tablespoon cinnamon, ⅛ teaspoon each ground cloves, nutmeg, and ¾ cup sugar in small bowl. Add 1 cup nut meats, either almonds or pecans, to 1 slightly beaten egg white, a few at a time, and rub between fingers to coat thoroughly. Toss into bowl of sugar and spices. Cover coat, place on buttered cookie sheet. Bake in slow oven (300 degrees F.) 30 minutes.

Spicy Entree and Sause

Mrs. Eugenia D'Camera, 1843 Burke street southeast, wins a $1 prize for a toasted nut loaf. A number of other very splendid nut loaves competed for cash awards, but this spicy, celery-tinged recipe was considered of special interest. The addition of peanut butter in this mixture brings out the toasted nut flavor more noticeably. Peanut butter gravy, spiked with sage, adds a final touch of nuttiness.

Mrs. D'Camera

Toasted Nut Loaf Topped With Peanut Butter Gravy

Combine 2 cups chopped nut meats, mixed or one kind, 2 cups soft entire wheat bread crumbs, 1 cup minced celery, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1-3 teaspoon thyme, 1 teaspoon onion juice, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons peanut butter, 1 cup scalded milk in order given, melting the butter or margarine and peanut butter together. Pack into an oiled breadpan and bake until browned, in a moderate oven, 350 to 375 F. Let stand a moment before unmolding. Serve with peanut butter gravy. Melt 2 tablespoons butter or margarine and add ½ cup peanut butter and 3 tablespoons flour. Cook together slowly until mixture begins to brown and gradually stir in 1½ cups boiling water. Add few drops onion juice, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon poultry seasoning and cook and stir until boiling point is reached.

Nut or Fruit?

Mrs. Ida Miller, 1225 Holbrook street northeast, receives $1 award for her almond soup. Strangely enough, although the majority of seasoned cooks and chefs classify the almond as a nut, it is a fruit. It is such a fragrant fruit, however, and so commonly believed to be a nutritious member of the nut family that no quarrel is made with any of the many contest entrants who submitted almond recipes. This rich soup recipe creates a satisfying meal in itself.

Mrs. Miller

Almond Soup

Put 2/3 cup sweet almonds and 6 bitter almonds through food chopper, adding 4 tablespoons cold water and pinch of salt slowly during process. Simmer with 3 cups chicken stock, 1 small onion, and 3 stalks celery, and then rub through sieve. Add 3 tablespoons butter, 2 cups scalded milk, 1 cup scalded cream, salt, pepper, and pinch of celery salt. Heat until very hot. Top with small broiled shrimps and a spoonful of whipped cream. Serve with crisp saltines.

Thanksgiving Dessert

Miss Mary Lou Cameron, 1929 Sixteenth street northwest, gets a $1 prize for her delicious pumpkin pie recipe. Each year around this time, pumpkin pies are of prime importance for their symbolism of Thanksgiving is undisputable. Few pumpkin pies reach the stage of immortality, however, for many are flat and drab in taste. The addition of pecan meats, orange extract and spices plus cream and beaten eggs make this pumpkin pie one to be long remembered.

Pecan Pumpkin Pie

Heat 1½ cups canned pumpkin with 1½ cups milk, ¼ teaspoon cloves, 1½ teaspoons cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon ginger, 1½ cups brown sugar packed firmly and ½ teaspoon salt. Pour over 2 slightly beaten eggs and cook in double boiler until thickened. Strain, cook, add 1½ cups thin cream, ½ teaspoon orange extract and 1 cup pecan meats, pack in hand freezer using 8 quarts chopped ice to 1 part rock salt, and freeze, or use electrical refrigerator. Top with blanced almonds and whip cream curls.

Contest Court

A committee of three judges will sit in session tomorrow to decide the fate of current contest entrants. Instead of this week's pudding recipe competition being judged by The Post food editor, past contest winners have been selected to sit in arbitration. This departure from usual procedure will be tested so that all entrants will feel that they, personally, are participating in the formation of their own food-page policies. The judges will be Mrs. Jay Lawler, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest; Mrs. Sara Lee Orange, 2025 I street northwest, and Miss Maria Weisbacker, 4423 Eighth street northwest.

Sweet Potato Crop Big Despite Drought

It's a big sweet-potato year for home gardeners. Those who keep tab on the crop situation predicted early in August that this year would bring the third largest sweet-potato yield in history. Later several weeks of dry heat cut down the harvest in many States, but there still will be many more sweet potatoes than usual.

The gold potato is no relation to the white potato. It belongs to the morning-glory family, which is entirely different, too, from the squash and the pumpkin; yet the sweet potato has so much in common with these larger yellow-fleshed vegetables that dietitians and cooks group them together.

The yellow color of these vegetables points out one reason for their dietary success; they are all good sources of vitamin A. Many other foods provide this vitamin, but few of them can be purchased for so small a cash outlay. Besides vitamin A, these vegetables can be counted on to furnish at least some of the vitamins B and G.

Coasters for Trays Made of Cork

The bark of the cork oak now doubles in an ornamental as well as utilitarian role.

New wooden trays, introduced at the Merchandise Mart, Chicago, feature eight cork coasters, set into the tray, so that the tray cannot possibly be marred by the serving of drinks and at the same time is beautified by the cork coasters in patterns. Other versions of the new trays feature a wooden bowl in the center, for pretzels, or a wooden rooster, on which hors d'oeuvres may be used, or tiny wooden frames, varicolored, around cork coasters. The different color assures the drinker that he will have his own glass back on the second "round." Still another type of the new cork coaster is a large wooden flower, which may be placed flat on each corner of the bridge table. The center of the flower is cork and is used as a coaster for the individual players at the table.

5-Point Diet Suggested for Growing Child

Calcium Important
Milk Essential
Vitamin C Needed

By Ida Jean Kain.

KNOWING that every mother is eager to give her child the foods that will enable him to be really well, I am passing along to you the advice of one of the world's leading nutritionists, Dr. Mary Swartz Rose, of Columbia University, who recently proposed to the members of the American Dietetic Association a "five-point diet for a five-point child."

Your child's diet should first be checked for vitamin A, the effects of which are seen in every part of the body. Glands, bones, teeth, nerves and eyes all depend upon an ample supply of this vitamin. So important are its effects that at the third meeting of the League of Nations committee on nutrition it was recommended that every child be given fish liver oil or some other source of vitamin A in addition to liberal quantities of whole milk, butter, eggs and green leafy vegetables.

Calcium Important

It is not easy to determine whether your child is growing up calcium poor. The only way to know that he is getting plenty of calcium is to see that he gets at least three glasses of milk a day along with the vitamins A, C and D, which enable him to utilize his calcium intake.

In sharp contrast to the hidden nature of a calcium shortage is the pallor associated with an iron deficiency. We are unable to detect with the eye, however, the milder degrees of anemia evidenced in a lessening of vitality which results from inadequate iron. Surveys show that the children who receive an egg daily as a means of assuring adequate iron have better health and stronger resistance to infection than those who do not have the egg.

Milk Essential

The fourth point in the achievement of the excellent child is through the daily adequate supply of vitamine C. Resistance to infection is markedly lowered when there is a deficiency of this vitamin. Furthermore, it is important to the utilization of calcium in relation to the growth and repair of bones and teeth. Foods rich in vitamin C are oranges, grapefruit, tomatoes and lemon, potatoes and raw cabbage.

Finally the five-point diet must furnish adequate vitamin B if it is to create in the child the inner urge for food. Make sure that the cereals and the bread you give your child are the whole grain variety. Loss of appetite is the first symptom of a B deficiency and the child who has lost his appetite should be given wheat germ in addition to the whole grain cereals and bread.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Frowned On by Father of Girl He Loves, Youth Ponders Advisability of Having a Talk With Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A year ago last June I met a young girl who lives in a suburban city adjoining Washington. Very shortly afterward, her father forbade her to see me, because of something he had heard about me, which was untrue. It seems the story was carried to him by the mother of a girl who was going with a boy friend of mine at the time. Not liking this boy, she extended her disapproval to include me also, and circulated many tales about both of us, most of which are untrue.

Had it not been for this woman's attitude, and the stories she told, I am sure this man would not have forbidden his daughter to see me. Several days ago I was talking with her and she acted as if she still likes me. I know for a fact that I am crazy about her. When her father first forbade her to see me, we sneaked around to see each other, but finally decided to break up, as we didn't like the deceit.

Since then I have had dates with other girls in the hope of forgetting her, but it hasn't worked. Do you think I should go to her father and try to win his confidence? I wish you would advise me through your column at the earliest possible date. Sincerely, BEWILDERED.

Commendable Idea

DEAR BEWILDERED: Nothing ventured, nothing gained. Your idea of seeking an audience with the girl's father for the purpose of setting him straight concerning your conduct and character is certainly worth a trial. It seems to me it would be an admirable and courageous gesture under the circumstances. But the outcome, of course, is on the lap of the gods. If you are as unjustly accused as you profess to be, and if the father is a man of open mind and judicious temperament, the conference might mark a real turning point in your life.

If, however, he is the heavy-parent type of father, inclined to distrust the performance and intention of every youth who dares admire his daughter, and vastly skeptical concerning the latter's ability and willingness to steer a sane course in affairs of the heart, your efforts to convince him of your essential decency may come to naught. Even so, you will have gained in moral stature by attempting such a feat.

If he refuses to grant you a hearing, he will be discrediting himself far more than you. Anyone who arrogates to himself the perilous responsibility of passing judgment on a fellow being has invited a necessity for granting the person under judgment a hearing if he asks for it. Indeed, it might be said that he owes the person under judgment that consideration, whether he asks for it or whether he doesn't. It seems to me that this father might well have taken the initiative in precipitating the interview you hypothecate, before dismissing you from his daughter's life as a worthless associate.

It is possible, of course, that the girl doesn't reciprocate your deep devotion; that, somewhat vaguely and unawarely, she is more in sympathy with her father's attitude than she admits to herself or to you; that she lacks—and knows she lacks—the independence and accuracy of judgment to choose her own friends wisely and defend that choice; and that the course she takes in all things is largely determined, both voluntarily and involuntarily, by the opinions of family and friends. She may be one of those persons who cheerfully subscribes to majority trends. Therefore, before attempting to speak to her father, it may be well to find out whether she shares your belief that the aim is worth the effort. M. H.

The Green-Eyed Monster

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a boy since early last summer. We had planned to go steady, but he lives quite a distance from me and often makes trips to a town near-by his home. Having heard that he is sometimes seen in the company of a certain girl there, I asked him if it was true and he admitted that it was, although he said it did not affect his understanding with me.

A few days ago I was told he had met another girl, an old friend of his in this town, and had taken her home. Shall I ask him about this? And if it is true, should I break off with him? I like him a great deal and if he were making more money I am sure we would be married. He has told me this himself. We are not engaged, but I have faithfully kept my promise to go only with him, and have passed up many chances at other dates to do so. What is your advice? ISABEL.

Fruits of Suspicion

DEAR ISABEL: I cannot imagine a worse fate, either for you or for this young man, than that of being married to each other. If you don't trust him out of your sight, by all means "break off with him." He may or may not be playing you false; yet if he is, his behavior is no worse than yours. Your mean-minded suspicions and assiduous surveillance of his actions are pretty contemptible. Something is radically wrong with the mental processes of a woman who hauls her sweetheart on the carpet every time she gets wind of the fact that he has been seen passing the time of day with some other woman. And no man save a Caspar Milquetoast would tolerate such goings-on for long. As a matter of fact, the quickest way to destroy a man's loyalty is to accuse him, habitually, of disloyalty.

Supposing this man were formally engaged, or even married, to you, it would not mean that he had forfeited the right to show a courteous or even cordial interest in other women of his acquaintance. He wouldn't represent much of a catch if he either could not or did not maintain friendly relations with women other than yourself. So far as I can gather from your letter, he is behaving in a perfectly normal fashion, in paying a bit of gallant, yet essentially meaningless, attention to other girls in your absence; and you are behaving in altogether outrageous fashion in attaching so much importance to it. ### For Pickle Perfection

To get the best results with pickles, don't use fruits or vegetables that are old or tough. Soft pickles usually result from overlong soaking or cooking, or the use of vinegar that is too strong. Tough, shriveled pickles are generally the result of using too much salt, sugar or vinegar.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 17.

BEDDED with department store feet, I'll give Spouse Leonard Hall a turn at bat today. He steps to the plate with two strikes already chalked up.

Last week the family decided to see how the other tenth lives, if it does, so we put on the spangles and formal opening of the formal Sert Room at the Waldorf, where the handsome murals by Senior Sert look down at odd things, mostly two-legged. Miss Hughes has convertible hair—up in the evenings, down in the daytime when observing the larcenies of the business world. She was wearing a little claire-potter evening number with a knitted dusty-pink upper part and a coral lower part, not knitted. I wore a double-breasted waiter suit. On the other hand, Mrs. Frank Henderson wore her $30,000 sables. It's a small world.

We had an excellent table overlooking the shambles, on the cuffo. On the other hand, the John Jacob Astors came late and couldn't even get a campchair. Before us spread this "cafe society" you read so much about if you're not careful—hundreds of it, in shining clothes and faces with a dull finish. Corks popped incessantly in a genteel way, for everyone in our set drank wine. One nouveau riche pusher, definitely not soignee, got his signals mixed and ordered beer. He slank out, his crest severely fallen. But from our vantage point we saw all the really great. Why Prince Obolensky, the perennial charm boy, sat so close I could have slugged him with a hard roll, but didn't. He is a brilliant Viennese waltzer, and dances for hours—at his age. But he's still beautiful.

All in all, it was a glorious, sticky night at the dear old Waldorf, which seems bent on getting all the stay-out trade in town just now. Just across the foyer from the Sert Room is the Empire Room where Maestro Beannah Goodman is installed with his swing symphony. If Coleman doesn't snare the young debauches with his waltzes, Ben snags them with his shags. As for us, we had had our night out among the "swells." With enormous relief, I took a can-opener to my iron shirt, back in our modest Murray Hill cave, resolving that the next time Miss Hughes had one of these dressing-up fits, I'd be out bowling duck-pins with the other fashion-show widowers. No one, not even Hughes, can make a silk purse out of me!

What kind of a luncheon? . . . Oh, the building committee . . . Well I'm afraid I couldn't possibly come tomorrow . . . Yes I know Dr. Speel always does make perfectly marvelous addresses, but I've got about a dozen things on . . . Well that's sweet of you, but really I don't believe I could even serve on the committee . . . Oh it's a perfectly marvelous work, but—well you see Mrs. March, I havn't been a bit well lately . . . No, I may have to go to see the doctor tomorrow . . . No my husband would simply have a fit if I took on any thing else . . . No I wouldn't want to serve unless I could really work . . . Well thank you so much for asking me. I'd simply love to help if I could . . . all right, thank you . . . yes just as soon as I'm better. Goodbye."

Tomorrow? . . . No, I'm all dated up tomorrow . . . No, I don't think you'd better put me on the list at all . . . Well the truth is I'm not at all well and I'll probably go to see the doctor tomorrow . . . Oh I know it's a wonderful cause and I'd simply love to help, only . . . The fancy aprons? Well, if I get better I'll see what I can do, but I promised my husband . . . All right, I'll let you know if I get better—and things slow up . . . All right. Goodbye."

IV

"HELLO . . . Oh, Bess, I'm so glad you called. I've been dying to see you . . . Well I would only I've been so busy . . . What? . . . No I havn't seen it yet, but everybody says it's a simply marvelous play. I've been after Tom . . . You have? . . . For tomorrow afternoon! . . . Why I'd love it! I'd adore it! I'd simply be thrilled to death!"

Color in Make-up Must Suit Dress

New York (AP).—The importance of color in the current mode has caused women to give almost as much thought to fashions in faces (with their make-up problems) as to fashions in frocks, in order to insure harmony between the two. To help simplify the make-up problem, a leading New York beauty specialist gives these tips:

For yellow and brown costumes choose a warm red rouge and lipstick, such as coral, and a peach powder.

With violet frocks wear orchid rouge and lipstick which has a very slight violet cast and a warm rosy champagne powder.

Sylvia Hoban Alexander Makes Bow To Washington Society at Tea

'Old' Washington There in Full Force
Parents' Home a Bower of Flowers

By Hope Ridings Miller

Wearing a quaint frock of cream brocaded satin sprigged with rose buds and fashioned with a fitted bodice, short sleeves puffed at the shoulder and buttons down the front, Miss Sylvia Hoban Alexander looked as if she might have stepped out of an album yesterday afternoon to make her bow to Capital society. And "old" Washington was there full-force to see her make it.

For well over two hours, the New Hampshire avenue home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Alexander, was filled to the walls with friends who could trace the bud's family history back to a hundred and fifty years ago when her ancestors played a prominent part in building Washington. Her brown bobbed hair and her bouquet of roses studded with orchids were modern accents in the lovely picture that was the debutante, but her picturesque gown might have been worn back in the days when her great-great-grandfather, James Hoban, designed and built the White House.

Even outside the Alexander home, there were indications that the party was THE social event of the day. Slim, sleek limousines pulling up to the curb deposited their loads with the help of William, the doughty doorman, who declared it was one of his "most busiest" days thus far this season.

Inside, a genial major-domo urged you to "rest your wraps" upstairs. But the party itself centered in the spacious flower-filled drawing room, where Mrs. Alexander received with her daughter, and in the dining room where the light from tall rose-colored tapers flickered on the gala scene.

Gowned in dark red lace, made with long sleeves outlined in sable, Mrs. Alexander and the debutante greeted the seemingly endless line of guests at one end of the drawing room. Behind them was a bower of roses and chrysanthemums, blending with the masses of blossoms that graced tall baskets and vases throughout the house

'Fishhouse' Punch Proves Popular

On the way from the drawing room to the tea table there was a pleasant stop at the small table, where Philadelphia "fishhouse punch" was served. Ladling out that delicious concoction was the debutante's sister, Mrs. John Meim Carter, of Philadelphia, who was becomingly gowned in plum-colored crepe, worn with a sable scarf and an enormous corsage. The former Miss Elise Hoban Alexander, Mrs. Carter has a host of friends in Washington, and many lingered to chat with her across the punch bowl. Also a center of attention was Mrs. Carter's small son, golden-haired Johnny Carter, who came close to stealing the show from yesterday's debutante.

Miss Louise Hoban Alexander, another sister, was here, there and everywhere, assisting at the party. She had chosen a stunning frock with a fuchsia bodice and a purple skirt, blending with her orchid corsage. Edward and James Alexander, brothers of the debutante, also assisted at hosting and were helping to look after guests during the entire party.

In the dining room, handsome old portraits surveyed the tea table and the guests that clustered around it. Table silver that had graced the debutante parties of other generations sparkled in the light from the four tapers that flanked the huge bowl of pink roses centering the table. Old friends of the family and debutantes of the season took their turns at pouring tea and coffee and serving ice cream and other dainties as the party moved merrily along.

Debutantes Assist At Tea Table

Among those presiding at the table were Mrs. William Barrett Ridgeley, Mrs. P. Lee Phillips, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman and Miss Eleanor Connelly. Debs and postdebs assisting included Miss Margaret Townsend, in a stunning tomato-red crepe frock; Miss Eleanor Meem, whose powder-blue dress was particularly becoming to her blonde hair; Miss Helen Crean, Miss Ashby Proctor, Miss Mary Wells, cousin of the debutante; Miss Jane Bodine, of Philadelphia, who had chosen a pencil-blue taffeta frock with triangular velvet inserts in the full skirt, and Miss Emily Vaux Cresson, also of Philadelphia, a house guest of Mrs. Tuckerman. Out-of-town guests assisting Mrs. Alexander included Mrs. Donald Alexander, of Detroit, and Mrs. Albert Pepper Gerhard, of Philadelphia, a cousin of the hostess.

Following the tea the girls in the house party and an equal number of young men went to the Chevy Chase Club for supper and dancing. This evening Miss Louise Alexander will entertain eighteen guests for her sister and her house guest, Miss Bodine, after which the company will go on to the Friday Evening Supper Club for dancing.

But back to yesterday's party. Who was there? Get out your Social Register and cull from it the names of Washington's oldest families, and add to that a generous list of the season's debutantes—if you want the answer. You won't need your diplomatic blue book nor the Congressional directory, for the company was almost entirely residential. In fact, come to think of it, the only person I saw there from the official set was Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, whose granddaughter, Miss Martha Coker will arrive in Washington today to join in the debutante whirl.

Residential Notables There in Droves

To mention but a few of the dozens of guests—there were Mrs. Henry D. Flood and her daughter, Miss Eleanor Flood, who once lived in the very house that was the scene of yesterday's party; the Rt. Rev. Edward L. Buckey, whose appearance at debutante teas is rare; Miss Nancy Leiter; Mrs. Smith Hempstone who arrived with her daughter, Miss Mary Dora Thompson; Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, who seemed to know everybody there, and Mrs. McCeney Werlich, who could scarcely take a step without running into an old friend.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis S. Owsley were glimpsed in the crowd; also Dr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne with their house guest, Mrs. William Blakeslee, of Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. William T. Mann with her mother, Mrs. William Beale; Mrs. Royal T. McKenna and her daughter, Miss Bambie McKenna; Miss Kate Scully, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem.

Debutantes of the season were all over the place. Among them was Miss Jane Eustis, who wore one of the prettiest ensembles there, a silver lame model with a short flaring skirt and a towering turban to match. Accompanying her was her pretty mother, Mrs. Chotard Eustis. Miss Agnes Magruder was another deb glimpsed in the crowd; and still others there were Miss Julie Cahill, Miss Doris Becker, the Misses Margaret and Claire Cotter, Miss Betty Fischer, Miss Barbara Henning and so on down the list of 1938 buds.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

MRS. WILLIAM BORAH, who never before has succumbed to the lure of seeing her name on the title page of a book, despite many flattering offers, is at least seriously considering telling her story. She has received a very flattering request to do a series of articles on her 30 years in Washington, and though she complains that her muse is not "working" very well, it's this time more than probable that the wife of the Idaho Senator will join the other Capital hostesses who have burst into print.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Nobody knows the Capital any better than Mrs. Borah, who arrived here first when Theodore Roosevelt was president. Small, fragile Mrs. Borah looks as though a strong breeze would blow her into the next county, yet she takes in daily enough parties to stagger even more rugged looking persons.

One of Mrs. Borah's many anecdotes, which, muse or no muse, should enliven any book on Washington, concerns an "at home" she gave shortly after her arrival here. As she nervously was wondering if everything was going well, she overheard one of her women guests say in loud, complaining tones, "But I only came because I thought these western senators always served whiskey."

FOREIGN DIPLOMATS often have complicated names, but the longest and most romantic of any belong to members of the Italian Embassy staff. The lengthiest is that of the Secretary, whose full title is Nobile Benedetto Caponazza dei Marchesi di Campolattaro. Close runners-up are the Naval Attache, Capt. don Umberto Cugia Marquis of Sant'Orsola, and the First Secretary, Don Marcello del Drago dei Principi d'Antuni.

Prince Mario del Drago, a cousin of the latter, arrived in New York yesterday on the Rex from his home in Italy. He expects ot visit here in the near future.

WE HEAR that Mrs. John Hay Whitney is at last to break into the movies, but not on horseback. The report is that she will make her film debut as a dance-hall hostess in the picture, "Dodge City."

WILLIAM PHILLIPS, United States Ambassador to Italy, was among the distinguished passengers on the Queen Mary landing in New York yesterday . . . Hugh Wilson's first book, "Education of a Diplomat," was fascinating reading, but its promised sequel should be even more interesting if he discusses his experiences as envoy to Germany.

PARTY NOTES: Mrs. George Grant Mason gave a small luncheon yesterday . . . Mme. Minthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister, has cards out for a similar party Thursday, December 1 . . . And Miss Janet Fish, superintendent of nurses at Emergency Hospital, will give a tea next Tuesday at the Sulgrave Club.

CAREER women are supposed to bother very little about a home life, but not Doris Stevens, noted worker for women's causes. She and her husband have been awarded a prize by the city fathers of Croton-on-Hudson, where their home is, for having done the year's best job on remodeling a house. Miss Stevens and her husband produced the ideas themselves.

Both will motor up from Washington today to receive the award. Miss Stevens will sail on the Santa Clara next week with the delegates to the Pan-American Conference, where she will present her annual report on progress in the status of women. Yesterday Miss Stevens gave a small farewell cocktail party for her friends in the Capital.

THANKS TO a recent change in the Chilean government, the Ambassador here, Manuel Trucco, expects to return from his forthcoming vacation in Chile. As several weeks ago he was the only "leftist" left among his country's Ambassadors, he thought he would be recalled, but now hopes to come back early in the spring, the present government being a liberal one.

'Napoleon' Ranks Guests At Doll Show

'Catherine' Present International Affair Program of Y. W. C. A. To Close Tuesday

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

Napoleon and Catherine de Medici are among the ranking guests at the Doll Fair opening at the Y. W. C. A. today under the sponsoship of the World Fellowship Committee, of which Mrs. William S. Culbertson is chairman. It is the first time the committee has arranged such an event and the call for dolls brought a response of personages and peasant folk from all corners of the globe. It also revealed doll collecting a hobby of both men and women in Washington.

Napoleon is a genial looking young Frenchman of imposing stature, compared to that of some of his neighbors in the handsome collection which belongs to Jean Hargrave Frantz. Catherine de Medici is one of several royal characters of history in a collection loaned by Mrs. W. Chapin Huntington. A distinguished American is the famous Dixie Doll in the rare collection belonging to Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, and including dolls of many countries.

Lewis Lofton Moneyway, former president of the Arts Club, provides a touch of humor with his group of character dolls, each accompanied by an apt description. There is, for instance, "Martha Mary—the first maiden in the village to leave home for the great city. Her eyes are wide with anticipation of the great adventure. For two years she will pound a typewriter and then return home and marry the soda clerk."

The display is on the top floor of the Y. W. C. A. at Seventeenth and K streets and all day yesterday owners of collections and members of the committee were working there arranging the exhibits. In addition to the dolls there were "Jack and the Bean Stalk" marionettes, Miss Faith Bradford's doll house and three doll houses loaned by Mrs. R. D. Marsden.

Mrs. Bradford's house, which represents 50 years of collecting "furniture and fixtures," is fascinating in the attention to minute detail it reveals. People live in Mrs. Bradford's house—and a look through it introduces the spectator to an interesting family. One of the amusing members is the young boy, who is shown in his room with his bulldog and his pet mice which he has just let out on the floor. The house is large, with every room completely furnished, and the overflow of family possessions stored in a large attic, which invites exploration. Everything is in plain view protected by white cellophane.

Mrs. Marsden's houses are miniature model homes, as attractive outside as in. The view of the rooms is from the rear and these too are handsomely furnished even to the grand piano with a music box inside, which stands in the drawing room of one. There is also a humble cottage among her houses, with a well, a woodpile and a clothes line in the yard.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Cunning Matches Cunning

Go where you will, you'll always find
That cunning must be met in kind.
—Old Mother Nature.

Farmer Brown's Boy knows this. He knew it when he went over to Aunt Sally's to set traps for the Rats that were overrunning the place so that she was almost in despair of getting rid of them. He knew, too, that of all the smaller people who wear fur none is more cunning, than Robber the Rat, not even Reddy Fox, who is noted for his cunning. So he knew that he must match cunning with cunning if he was to catch those Rats.

"I've brought several kinds of traps," he explained to Aunt Sally. "If I can't catch them in one kind perhaps I may in another."

So there were powerful spring traps that killed instantly, and there were cage traps that merely held as prisoners, unhurt, those who entered. The spring traps could be set only in places where there was no likelihood that a Coon or a Skunk would step in them and perhaps get a broken leg. The cage traps could be set anywhere for no one larger than a Rat could get into one.

The traps were cunningly placed where Farmer Brown's Boy knew that the Rats were in the habit of traveling back and forth. They were not baited lest bait should arouse suspicion. They were cleverly hidden to be stepped in by the unwary. Other spring traps were temptingly baited, as were the cage traps. The traps were set in the woodhouse, the pantry, the barn, in runways and at holes which had been made by the Rats.

The first night two half-grown Rats were caught. After that the traps remained empty although some were sprung and the bait taken. Farmer Brown's Boy knew then that he was dealing with wise old leaders who knew all the tricks and who were watching out for the safety of the others. It was so. No sooner did Robber learn of the fate of the two that were caught than he warned all the tribe to beware of danger and lie low until just where the danger was had been learned.

So the mothers remained at home to keep the children there while Robber and the oldest, wisest and most cunning of the tribe searched for the traps. Those that were baited were easily found. Some were cunningly sprung and the bait taken. From some that couldn't be sprung without too much risk the bait was stolen. Just how the cunningly hidden traps were found I do not pretend to know but they were found and the word was passed. It must have been for the Rats were as active as ever, but none were caught.

So cunning was matched against cunning and Robber the Rat and his tribe were too much for Aunt Sally and Farmer Brown's Boy. They continued to thrive and increase in numbers. They became bolder in proportion as their number increased. But with all their boldness they were smart. Whatever may be said against Robber the Rat it cannot be said that he is not smart. They were too smart to make the mistake of being overbold in the presence of Jimmy Skunk, Bobby Coon or any of the members of their families.

"I fear," said Aunt Sally mournfully, "that I shall have to close the Woodhouse Night Club. It is getting too cool for me to sit out there evenings to serve my guests and it is useless to leave food for them for those pesky Rats would get it all before the Coons and the Skunks had a chance."

And so it was. Those Rats could empty a pan of food and lick the pan clean almost as fast as it could be filled. Always one or more was on watch. Aunt Sally never put a pan of food out in the woodhouse that the Rats did not know of it, and her back would hardly be turned before they would be at it.

"If we had a Ferret we would soon be rid of them," said Farmer Brown's Boy.

"Just what is a Ferret?" Aunt Sally wanted to know.

"It is a member of the Weasel family—" He didn't finish the sentence. "I have an idea!" he cried and was gone.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

A Dark Plot

Suspicious of everything that originates in the office of the New York Yankees—his pet hate when he is not busy hating the National League—Mr. Clark C. Griffith is scrutinizing with great distrust the Yankees' plan to place the league's ball players under eight-month contracts.

POVICH.

It's a deep, dark plot, selfishly conceived and ruthlessly intended, to hear Mr. Griffith tell it. "But they ain't a-goin' to get away with it!" thundered the old gentleman yesterday. "I can see right through their little trick. They're trying to slip something over on us and the league won't stand for it."

The Yankees are trying to put every other club owner in the league on the spot in an attempt to protect themselves from holdouts, as Griffith sees it, and he is prepared to battle furiously in the league's councils for its rejection.

"Why do the Yankees want to spread the players' pay over eight months? I'll tell you why," snorted Griff. "They're scared stiff of their holdouts and they want the league to help whip 'em into line. They're afraid to take their chances with signing players like we've been taking for 30 years.

Lots of Trouble

"Who have the two big holdouts been these last couple of years? Joe DiMaggio and Red Ruffing, that's who. The Yankees figger that if the players' pay starts on March 1, the holdouts will be losing money if they don't report for spring training. They reckon that kind of a rule would help whip 'em into line. They're trying to duck their own responsibility in signing their players.

"They're the only club that is troubled much by holdouts. It's lucky for them they won the pennant last season. Why, everybody knows that nobody on the team was speaking to DiMaggio until the middle of June. Those other Yanks didn't like it a bit when DiMaggio missed spring training and threatened their pennant chances with his slump. 'Course when they won the pennant everything was forgiven.

The Yankees don't have the courage to deal with their holdouts and have gone crying to the league, as Griff sees it. "Why didn't they make DiMaggio and Ruffing train at their own expense for 30 days before they put 'em on the pay roll?" he demanded. "That's what I did with Roy Spencer and Walter Stewart a few years ago. The Yanks are afraid to crack down, that's what. But there's another angle."

No Extra Pay!

Yeah?

"Yeah. I can see through these Yankee tricks. I've been battling 'em all my life. They've been trying to run this league for years, but clear-thinking people like myself won't let 'em. Know what they're trying to do when they ask for an eight-month contract for the ball players?"

You tell us.

"Oh, they're smart ones all right. What they're really trying to do is make it tough on the club owners in this league that don't have as much money as they do. Sure, they're willing to pay the players for the six weeks of spring training, and I'll tell you why. They're not giving the players extra pay, understand. They are only spreading it over eight months.

"The Yankees are the only club in the league this year who are 'set.' They're champions. They don't need any replacements. They'll only take a half dozen or so rookies to camp. That means they'll only have to pay spring training wages for a half dozen players who may be cut off the squad.

No Dice Here

"But look at the other clubs in this league. Look at Washington, for example. Bucky Harris will be taking 15 or 20 young pitchers South. That means they'll have to go on our pay roll on March 1, under the Yankee arrangement. That's a terrific expense and a hardship on the club owners.

"When we sign players to contracts, those contracts don't go into effect until the middle of April, when the season starts. If we kept them, then of course we pay them. But what the Yankees want us to do is start paying our ball players before they make good for us.

"No, sir!" snorted the old gentleman. "It won't work. If the club owners have to pay players while they are on trial, you know what will happen? We won't take so many players South, that's what! Boys who otherwise would have a chance to go to training camp and show us what they can do, wouldn't get that chance if we were forced to pay them all during training. We'd cut down on the size of the squads and young Americans wouldn't have the same opportunities."

And what did Griffith plan to do about the Yankees' plan when the club owners assembled in their league meeting next month?

Another Comeback For Jim Braddock

Central May Win School Crown Today

Eastern Underdog Riders, Wilson Meet Blues Undefeated Both Games at 3:15

Bruising Blue Gridders of Central High, undefeated, untied and only scored upon twice, wind up an altogether impressive march to the 1938 interhigh championship today, meeting Eastern's meek and winless defending champions at Central Stadium, starting at 3:15.

By every method of picking a grid winner, Central seems to have the game locked up. Its five opponents in the series to date: Western, Anacostia, Roosevelt, McKinley and Wilson, have expired in that order from the vicious line-smashing, accurate aerials and stone-wall defense of the mutilating Mount Pleasanters. Eastern, according to its coach, "has a chance, but it isn't so good."

Wilson vs. Roosevelt

Also on the interhigh menu today is a clash between two cellar-dwellers, Wilson and Roosevelt, on the Western gridiron at 3:15. Neither has managed to win a game so far, though Wilson flaunts two deadlocks and three losses in the face of Roosevelt's four straight losses. Roosevelt probably will be the favorite, however, due to its weight advantage and the number of its dependable substitutes. It is Woodrow Wilson's final start in its second year as a member of the interhigh family.

The chances of Eastern's upsetting Central and causing a play-off are better today than they might have been at any other time during the season. Coach Artie Boyd's eleven is intact, including a long list of reserves, and he'll be pushing the boys to the limit. Jack Teague, regular quarterback, has returned to the line-up after sitting the last game out with a case of grippe. Also in the backfield will be Paul Cohill, Francis Hallama and Ray Soo. Junior Carroll, wingman, who is the sole Easterner to cross an opponent's goal this season, will also be ready for action.

Six High Scorers

Central, on the other hand, will be starting a line-up which includes 6 of the first 15 high scorers in the series—Jimmy Clark, end; Benny Steiner, quarterback, and Dick Farr, end, leading the scorers in that order. Clark has scored four touchdowns in five games, two with lengthy aerials and two with end-around sweeps. Steiner has scored but two touchdowns, but he has hurled no less than six touchdown passes and place-kicked successfully for extra point 10 times out of 17 tries.

Probable starting line-up:

Silver Spring Scene Of Devitt, Bullis Game

The prep school championship of the District will be decided today at Sligo Field, Silver Spring, where Bullis and Devitt continue a rivalry which grows stronger every year. This year's renewal will see the forces of Bullis installed as favorite, though it was Devitt's finest team in some years which whipped the Bullis boys last year, 9-6.

The 1937 prep classic was featured and won by the last quarter field goal of Lee Fones, Devitt backfield ace. Fones was lost by graduation, but five lettermen remain from the squad to furnish Devitt a strong pre-game chance. The veterans are Whitey Crawford, Bill Richards, Mort Walker, Art Farquhar and Herb Farnsworth.

Bullis has split exactly even in its six games to date. It lost to Massanauten, Staunton and Archmere Academy of Delaware, but won from Shenandoah Valley Academy, Forrest Park Academy and the Blue Ridge College Frosh.

| Bullis. | Position. | Devitt. |
|---|---|---|
| McTigue | L.E. | Stanton |
| Pilner | L.T. | Fleishmann |

Terp Mentor Speaks at Umpires' Banquet Event Honors Retiring Head, 'Shorty' Hughes Sports Celebrities Attend Gala Affair

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Addressing a large gathering of prominent sportsmen and Washington baseball umpires, Frank Dobson, University of Maryland football coach, last night emphasized the increasing need for professional officials in collegiate sports to keep interest at its current level.

Speaking at the annual banquet of the District of Columbia Baseball Umpires Association, Dobson pointed out that the major leagues, semi-pro and sandlot circuits employ men trained specifically for the work to umpire their games. Colleges, he said, have been lax in this detail and their sports have suffered accordingly.

The tall Terrapin mentor mentioned no specific instances but made it clear that officiating, particularly in football, should be entrusted to men agile enough to cover fast-moving plays, and should receive sufficient remuneration to enable them to devote their full time to the work. Not until this move is made, he added, will collegiate sports be on the same plane as the professional pastimes.

Hughes Retires

The banquet marked the termination of James Y. (Shorty) Hughes' term as president of the association, and he was succeeded by George Watt. Al Jeffries was elected vice president and Walter Frye was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

With Arch McDonald, radio sports commentator, acting as master of ceremonies, the affair was one of the most successful and enjoyable ever held. McDonald introduced Bill McGowan, veteran American League arbiter, who told a humorous story of breaking into the big leagues.

McGowan, it seems, had gone South for spring training with Washington on more or less of a trial trip, officiating in the exhibition games. The Nationals' opponents on the last leg of the trip were the Boston Braves, who took delight in "riding" the umpire. Finally, the clubs hit Washington and met at Griffith Stadium before a large Sunday audience. "Shorty" Hughes was assigned to work the game with McGowan, who went behind the plate.

From the first pitch the Braves were on McGowan's neck, calling him every vile name that popped into their heads until he finally could stand no more.

Path to Glory

"Shorty," he said, talking to Hughes between innings, "that's a nasty hunch in the Braves' dugout and they're giving me an awful shellacking. You try to pick out a couple of the worst ones, let me know who they are and I'll throw 'em out of the game."

"Didja spot 'em," McGowan asked?

"Yeah, I got 'em," said "Shorty."

"Who are they?"

"Good Lord, the whole team, Bill."

New Year's Eve Tilt In Philadelphia May Draw Hoyas

Philadelphia, Nov. 17 (AP).—Jay L. Kerley, retired naval officer who is promoting a New Year's eve football "classic" in the Philadelphia Municipal Stadium, said today he had about a dozen "outstanding" teams under consideration for a contest he hopes will rival the Rose Bowl.

He has leased the stadium, which seats 102,000, for the proposed game and has an option for another game next year.

Several "good nibbles" have been received from possible competitors, Kerley said. Among the teams he said he was considering are Pittsburgh, Fordham, Carnegie Tech, Tennessee, Texas Christian, Villanova, Santa Clara, Tulane, Louisiana State, Holy Cross, Iowa State, Georgetown and Oklahoma.

Bobs Boys Takes Cheer Handicap

Pawtucket, R. I., Nov. 17 (AP).—After running second in two previous starts here, the Cosgrave Stable's Bobs Boys today won the featured What Cheer Handicap at Narragansett Park.

The time was 1:44.1. The Cosgrave entry paid $4.40, $2.50 and $2.20. Dunade returned $3.20 and $2.50 and Billy Van Nuys $2.90.

Ed Meske Wins From Garibaldi

Bout Is Thriller Uses New Neck Lock Referee Loses Shirt Coleman in Draw

The audience gasped at the sudden and wholly unexpected finish that found Garibaldi, a top-heavy favorite, limp and prostrate after a brisk exchange of elbows in the final 3½ minutes of the match. Until Meske picked up Garibaldi and dumped him on the floor the Italian looked like a certain winner.

Meske employed a brand new neck lock, the pretzel hold, to wear down Gino for the finish. Three times he clamped it on Gino's bulging neck before the latter struck back with his fists. Meske fought back until both were groggy and was staring defeat squarely in the face when Gino started to lift him over his head for a finishing body slam.

Garibaldi, however, hadn't strength enough to put Meske's 200-odd pounds up over his shoulders, and when he relaxed his grip Ed seized him and hurled him to the canvas. He merely had to fall on him to get the decision. Garibaldi, upon being revived, slugged Meske a couple of times and tore off Referee Benny Bortnick's shirt when the latter intervened, but was finally quieted and led to the dressing room.

In the remaining preliminaries Jack League threw Tony Colesino in 19½ minutes; Tommy Rae defeated George Kondylis in 18¼ minutes, and Bibber McCoy slapped down Ed Newman in 15½ minutes.

Georgetown Is Ready For Maryland Game

Hoyas Reported in Perfect Condition Team Is at Full Strength for Battle Terps Also Shipshape; Squad Drills Hard

By Jack Munhall.

"My team is ready for Saturday. We should win, but if we don't I'll have no alibis."

Thus spoke Georgetown Coach Jack Hagerty yesterday after he watched his undefeated, untied Hoyas in a lengthy scrimmage against freshmen, equipped with Maryland plays.

The Georgetown squad is in excellent condition, both mentally and physically, according to Hagerty, and if the Terps spoil their perfect season, it will be only because Maryland is the better team on Saturday when the local rivals meet in the fourth renewal of their new series.

The return to practice yesterday of Bill Burke, stellar guard, brought the Georgetown squad to full strength and only Center John Riofski, injured in the West Virginia game, will be missing for the fray.

One of the reasons for Hagerty's optimism, a marked change from his mood Monday, is the seriousness with which his boys are preparing for the oft-beaten Terps. There is not a sign of overconfidence or disdain for the ability of the Terps, who have lost seven games, as the Hoyas zip through their practice drills.

Hoyas Show Respect

The respect they hold for Maryland is reflected in the signs dotting their dressing room. Squarely in the middle of the room, place where none can miss it, is a placard which fairly shouts in large, bold letters:

"1937—Maryland, 12; Georgetown, 2.

Strewn about the room are other signs which read: "We won't stop at seven straight," and "Beat the Terps."

The Hilltop campus last night was the scene of one of the biggest pep rallies and bonfires in Georgetown's history as the students paraded and sang and otherwise celebrated in anticipation of the first perfect football season in 64 years of intercollegiate competition, which will be realized with a victory over Maryland.

Terps Hard at Work

At Maryland yesterday there was no celebration but rather plenty of hard work for the squad. Coach Frank Dobson drilled his charges until dark and then turned on the flood lights.

Believing a passing attack will be Maryland's best offensive weapon against a Georgetown line which has yet to yield a touchdown, Dobson paid special attention to Charlie Weidinger, his great passer and clever quarterback.

The Maryland squad, fully cognizant of the terrific odds against defeating Georgetown, is reported to be in great condition and ready to play its best brand of football.

In a game that will be watched closely by followers of both schools, the Georgetown and Maryland freshman elevens will meet at 2:30 this afternoon at College Park. This game holds significance for in the past a victory for the frosh has presaged a defeat for the varsity.

Henry Armstrong To Defend Title In Cleveland Show

Cleveland, Nov. 17 (AP).—Henry Armstrong, lightweight and welterweight boxing champion of the world, agreed today to defend his welter title on the Cleveland News Christmas fund show here December 5. His opponent will be Al Manfredo, of Los Angeles.

Ceferino Garcia, who meets Armstrong in a title fight in New York November 25, also agreed to terms and will defend the title against Manfredo if he whips Armstrong. The Cleveland bout will be 15 rounds.

Solly Krieger, of Brooklyn, world's middleweight champion, will meet Carmen Barth, of Cleveland, in a ten-round nontitle bout on the same card. Another match will bring together Louis Ambers, former lightweight champion, and Frankie Wallace, of Cleveland.

Hockey Rangers Beat Black Hawks

Chicago, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The Chicago Black Hawks tonight were defeated by the fast skating New York Rangers, 1 to 0, in a National Hockey League game before 12,404 fans at the stadium.

It was the Hawks' first defeat. They previously had won four straight games. The Rangers now are the only undefeated team, although Chicago retained its league lead with eight points. Toronto is second, and the Rangers third.

Elmer Layden, Thin Man of Notre Dame, Backs Navy's Powell for All-America

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Nov. 17.—Big-time grid coaches all over the country are joining the Pete Powell-for-All-American Club—Elmer Layden, the thin man of Notre Dame, is the latest recruit.

Powell, Navy captain and end, caught Layden's eye in the Notre Dame game at Baltimore. Layden told Lieut. Hank Hardwick, Navy coach, that he'd pick Powell over the other ends he saw in action against the South Bend Ramblers.

Layden joined Lou Little, Columbia coach, in cheering for the rugged Forester, Ark., wingman. Little said Powell and Brud Holland, Cornell Negro star, were the outstanding ends in the East this year.

Hardwick, of course, has gone overboard for his flank ace. Powell, a three-year veteran, is the surest pass receiver on the squad. Hardwick shudders now to think how close Powell came to being lost to the Academy squad. In his plebe year the modest youngster didn't think he had a chance in big-league football, and failed to turn out. It was only when an assistant coach spotted him catching passes in the best basketball fashion that Powell was persuaded to try for the team.

The Arkansas Traveler has snared 22 passes this year. He played in the backfield two years ago, and is a deceptive runner in an open field after taking a toss.

Hardwick also points out that Powell is a sure blocker at the line and downfield, and is a jolting tackler. His team leadership has been outstanding, and he is a 60-minute ball player who never gets injured.

Navy scrimmaged against the "B" squad tonight. The scrubs were togged out in Army uniforms and ran Army plays. Hardwick stressed defense against Army passes in the workout.

Big Cliff Lenz, the 200-pound back hurt in the Penn game, was still nursing his injured leg. Lenz was billed to return to practice today, but his leg failed to respond to treatment.

Leaders Post Scores of 68 At Half Way

Harper Third at 69 Walper Bags a 76 Diffenbaugh Has 78 Worsham Cards 83

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 17.—Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, Va., and Gene Sarazen, of Brookfield Center, Conn., registered 35, 33—68 today to lead at the halfway mark in the 36-hole Mid-South professional golf tournament.

Seldom, if ever, has Pinehurst witnessed so general a broadside of good golf as the money hawks turned in. Twenty-one of the field of 97 equaled or bettered par 72.

Sarazen, who started with a bad 5 at the par 4 first, hit his stride at the third by dropping a 10-foot putt for a birdie 3 and then settled into the finest round he has played here in a dozen years.

"My Dodo, No. 4 wood," Sarazen said, "started to work and I practically knocked the flag out of the hole four times. I did hit it at the fifteenth. At three other holes where I used the Dodo I was close to the hole."

Sarazen missed a 3-foot putt on the eighteenth which would have given him a 67 and a tie for the course competitive record.

Cruickshank, who celebrated his forty-fourth birthday yesterday, needed only short putts for his 68. He played in a threesome with Tommy Armour who had a 70 and Jimmy Thompson who laced out a 71.

A stroke behind the leaders were Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., with 35-34—69, and Jimmy Hines, of Long Island, the metropolitan champion, with 33-36—69. Going out, Hines had birdies at the third, fourth and fifth.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, of Little Rock, Ark., the winner last year in a play-off against Henry Clay Poe, of Durham, N. C., required 36-41—77. Young Bobby Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C., the only amateur competing, had a 74.

Enrico Venturi Stops Massey

Philadelphia, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Enrico Venturi, 143, Italy, stopped Lew Massey, 137, Philadelphia, in the fourth round of their scheduled eight-round fight at the Olympic Club tonight. Massey could not answer the bell for the fifth because of a cut over his right eye.

Hunting

By Bill Ackerman

Opening day, as usual, has brought all sorts of stories, from full bags and complete satisfaction, to little or no game and plenty of squawking. The variance is due, of course, to just how well the area hunted was looked over before the season. But isn't that always the way? The fellow who gets out with his dogs, or even just to tramp the fields and woods on a week-end or two, is the one to find the good going when the birds and bunnies are fair game.

ACKERMAN.

There also has been the usual last-minute search for blinds, by wild-fowlers, who failed to get the necessary permit to put one out, and as well by those who always figure to use that of some friend. And failing in that, rent one for a day or two.

Duck hunters wanting blinds on the Potomac, write Bob Burdette at Woodridge, Va. With the right kind of weather, it is sometimes hard to get any one of his three blinds, but he will always contact some one of the many other guides in that section. One, by the way, that has supplied fair shooting, even in the drab years, and is used by more than a few local wild-fowlers. The usual fee is $10 for two.

Down the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia, and particularly on Sineapuxent and Chincoteague Bays, just back of the narrow strip of sand that is the ocean front, where every bayman has a blind, we advise going to one of the many clubs.

That of Selby Purnell, The Pine Tree Gun Club, is available for one day or ten, and for as many as a dozen or 15 hunters. Good blinds, comfortable quarters. Ten bucks a day covers everything but the shells. The address is Berlin, Md.

At Ocean City, Capt. Crawford Savage, better known for his white marlin fishing offshore, returned yesterday from a three-day trip to his clubhouse 12 miles down the shore. The shooting was in no way comparable to what it will be with a little cold weather. The total bag for the trip was 15 birds. Shooting in the salt marshes is always better after the fresh water marshes are covered with ice.

Savage only takes parties of four, for a minimum of three days. Has extremely comfortable quarters, and supplies everything down to the last goose or duck decoy. The one exception to that is, of course, the shells. It is hardly possible to supply the kind everyone uses. Charges are $150 for the works, which prorated, makes a swell trip at small cost to each individual, and the chance of getting a goose or two with the ducks.

Hunters taking part in the annual Pisgah Forest Big Game Hunt, which got under way on November 7, bagged a total of 150 deer during the first week of the hunt. Largest kill was a 205-pound eight point buck. It was taken on the third day. One hundred and fifty hunders participated in the first three-day period. When the came out of the woods another 150 went in for the second period of three days. Each hunter is allowed a buck or a bear.

North Carolina is really going to town in the matter of making the State a sportsman's paradise, and in the right way. Services of hunting and fishing guides can now be obtained through the State service at Raleigh, where they have a regular news bureau connected with the department of conservation. Bill Sharp is the head of the bureau and can be addressed for any kind of information on fishing and hunting.

More than 200 guides are registered with this office from almost every section, their experience averaging 13 years. Those registered have equipment consisting of 131 fishing boats and 231 hunting dogs. They are experienced in hunting deer, bear, quail, turkey, pheasant, fox, grouse, ducks and geese. Many of the names of guides we have been giving you in this column are listed. Some of them are new to us this year, but if their ability and equipment are up to that of those we have known for more than a few years, they are alright, and our recommendation is to use this service anytime you want to fish or hunt in North Carolina.

New York, Nov. 17.—The middleweight championship of New York State will be fought out at the Garden tomorrow night between a couple of California Italians, Fred Apostoli and Young Corbett 3d, and prospects are it will be a rattling good fight.

The reason a more extensive title will not be at stake in the 15-round battle is the fact that the National Boxing Association, which rules the game in 47 other States and the District of Columbia, regards Solly Krieger, of New York, as the 160-pound king. It's sort of confusing.

Corbett, a 33-year-old southpaw, won a close 10-round decision over Apostoli in San Francisco last February. That is the only smear on Apostoli's extraordinary record, which includes knockout victories over Marcel Thil of France, Freddie Steele and (of all people) Krieger.

That Eastern critics did not take the Coast result too seriously is reflected in the fact that Apostoli, a great favorite hereabouts, has been made a 5-to-9 choice to whip Corbett this time. Freddie, himself, is extremely confident, and so is Corbett, for that matter.

Unless a lot of fans change their minds in the last hours, the turnout threatens to be a poor one, probably not over 10,000. There are two obvious reasons for the lack of interest. First, Corbett is known here only by reputation, and, second, there will be a fight in the same hall a week from tomorrow night between Henry Armstrong and Ceferino Garcia for the welterweight belt.

There is the added drawback that a lot of the locals think Krieger, the native son, is getting a kicking around by the State Athletic Commission. Solly, they feel, won the middleweight title when he hospitalized Al Hostak, the previous holder out in Seattle. There is talk that Solly's Brooklyn pals will picket tomorrow night's affair, parading the sidewalk with banners saying "this is not a champeenship fight."

The commission has asked Krieger to fight the winner for the "All-America" middleweight crown, but Krieger says he sees no percentage in scrapping for something he already has. The commission hasn't yet thought up an answer to that one.

As for the winner tomorrow night, it seems sensible to string along with the odds—Apostoli. He is the younger man and he is a corking good fighter with a record to prove it. He admits, frankly, that he underestimated Corbett the other time and did not know how to fight a southpaw. Now, he says, he knows how.

Corbett argues that he did it once and can do it again. The fact that it will be his first 15-rounder doesn't trouble him. An oldtimer, he says, learns how to pace himself for any distance. Considering the years he has been in the ring, he is remarkably free of scars. He has taken very little punishment.

Woodward Prep Scores Easy Victory

Woodward Prep's gridiron squad blanked the junior varsity team of St. Albans yesterday on the St. Albans field, 32-0, bringing its victories to two won and two lost. Star of the tilt was Jerry Noyes, halfback, who raced over the green line for two touchdowns, and generally proved himself the class of both teams. The Prep lads were never in danger during the game, having run up a 19-0 lead by halftime and increasing on the advantage through the second half.

Lee May Prove a Tartar For Champion Archibald

Joe Favored, but Anything Can Happen
Lee Plans to Make It Interesting Bout

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With unpleasant memories of two consecutive form reversals lingering in their minds, those oft-quoted "veteran observers" are hesitating a bit before making Featherweight Champion Joey Archibald a prohibitive favorite over Paul Lee, whom he meets Monday night at the Arena.

No one doubts for a moment, needless to say, that Archibald will be the popular choice, but Lee's mere presence in the same ring is enough to guarantee an interesting evening and lend an air of uncertainty to the proceedings. Lee happens to be one of those rough and ready rioters whose unorthodox tactics leave the customers in a continual dither.

On paper he doesn't figure to come close to whipping Archibald, but the "on-paper" dope is mild compared with the Tennessee wild man's capers. Lucky punches have decided more than one bout, by knockouts and by technical knockouts, and the way Lee swings one never knows when a lucky sock on the chin will win for him.

They say Marty Gallagher landed a lucky punch when he slit Tony Galento's eye open and won by a technical knockout, and that Jimmy Jones got over another lucky one when he belted out George Abrams with a roundhouse right last winter. It is a matter of record that so-called lucky blows have ended more than one important fight, so it is not unreasonable to believe that Archibald can be the victim of one.

Lee at least can make it interesting for Joey, because he takes a punch well and is not backward in going after the enemy. He has yet to make a bad fight here, or in any other ring, and there is no apparent reason to believe he'll blow up this time.

Joey Archibald To Challenge Rodak for Title

A promising step toward clarification of the muddled featherweight situation was announced last night by Heine Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, who said he had received word that Joey Archibald will challenge Leo Rodak to a bout within 30 days. The challenge will be filed Monday when Archibald, recently crowned champion by New York, comes here to meet Paul Lee in a 10-round bout at the Area. Rodak is the National Boxing Association's No. 1 contender for the title.

Galento-Feldman Bout Canceled After 'Fiasco'

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 17 (U.P.).—As an aftermath of Monday night's fistic fiasco in Philadelphia, Tony Galento's heavyweight bout with Abe Feldman, scheduled for Newark on December 8, was canceled today.

Abe Greene, State athletic commissioner, suggested that fat Tony engage in a few bouts in other States before attempting to return to the ring wars in his native New Jersey.

Commissioner Greene said he wished to be certain that Galento had recovered completely from his recent attack of pneumonia before trying to fight again in New Jersey. Tony's manager, Joe Jacobs, admitted that Galento's condition seemed below par Monday night when he knocked out Harry Thomas at Philadelphia. Thomas was suspended in Pennsylvania after the widely criticized bout.

A Wrestling Editor's Real Headache: Six World Title Matches Tonight!

By Paul Mickelson,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 17.—Battling Pistone, who is our wrestling editor simply because nobody else will have any truck with the mysterious business, today tried to peddle his job. Even Pistone, a carefree fellow with a love for figures, couldn't endure the modern trend in the grunt industry when he discovered the "world heavyweight wrestling championship" will be defended in six different cities tomorrow night.

"Give me a simple job like counting the number of people who pass Forty-second street and Fifth avenue at noon time," requested the upset Battler. "I can't keep up with them any more! Look at tomorrow night's all-championship program."

Well, the list is unbelievable—even for the wrestlers. Six "championship matches" for the same title in seven cities on the same night unquestionably sets a new high for sports dafiness even in rassling. This is the program that caused Pistone's surrender:

At Tampa, Fla.: "World heavyweight Champion" Dick Shikat vs. Sholem Whale-em Aleichem.
At Cincinnati, Ohio.: "World Heavyweight Champion," John Pesek vs. Nig Wilcox.
At Philadelphia: "World Heavyweight Champion" Bronko Nagurski vs. "International World Heavyweight Champion" Jim Londos.
At St. Louis: "World Heavyweight Champion" Crusher Casey vs. Ali Baba.
At Houston, Texas: "World Heavyweight Champion" Leo Daniel Boone Savage vs. Elmer Wiggins.
At Bridgeport, Conn.: "World Heavyweight Champion" Steve Passos vs. King Kong Frankenstein.

"It'll be the biggest wrestling night since day before yesterday," he said. "Eight were listed for that night but two were called off on account of bad train schedules when the promoters saw the crowds. By late Friday night, we'll have only six 'champions.'

"Londos is the international champ. He even claims the title of Mars. Friday night's winners will be Shikat, Pesek, Casey, Savage, Passos and Londos. Wish I could pick football winners like the wrestlers!"

Nobody really knows how many grunters claim the "world heavyweight championship." Since the death of Jack Curley two years ago, the rassling business has gone in for wholesale lots. Every promotor has a champ. Nobody seems to care much.

This corner used to enjoy watching Pesek, the Ravenna, Nebr., tiger man. Then we saw him wrestle big George Godfrey. George was a tough guy with a chin so tough even Jack Dempsey couldn't knock him down. He won the first fall from Pesek by cracking him a good, stiff right to the jaw. Pesek recovered and won the next fall by giving tough, old George a slap on the tummy. Down George went. After a 20-minute rest period, it was announced:

Archibald Quits Books for Bouts

Archibald, a freshman pre-medical student, expressed the belief that he would enroll again at the start of the 1939 fall term.

Rated by his professors as a fine student, the freshman champ has lost so much time from his books while fighting that it is a practical impossibility to make up his work in time for mid-year examinations.

With the offer of several good bouts, Joey has decided to make what money he can now and complete his college course later.

Capt. Harper Hurt

Capt. John Harper, guard of the Georgetown Prep football team, will be lost to the squad for the rest of the season, it was announced last night. He suffered a broken shoulder in the game Wednesday with Loyola High of Baltimore, which the locals lost, 20-6.

Harvard, Yale Tilt Tops Saturday's Traditional Gridiron Games

57th Battle Since 1875 For Elevens

Old Rivals Top List 5 Games in Mid-West Bears, Stanford Meet Lehigh in 72d Game

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 17.—The Harvard football team, equipped with one of the country's trickiest offenses and labeled "the best team that ever lost four straight," will move into the Yale Bowl Saturday favored for the first time in years to beat the Elis in this most traditional of all traditional games.

Other battles—Notre Dame-Northwestern, Wisconsin-Minnesota, Rice-Texas Christian—will have more bearing on sectional and national ratings. Yet this one, more than any other with the exception of the annual Army-Navy clash, can draw an impressive crowd no matter what the records of the combatants are.

This year they certainly aren't much. Harvard has beaten only Princeton of five major rivals. Yale, winner over Navy and Brown, has lost to Columbia, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Dartmouth and Princeton. Still 60,000 customers will be on hand for this fifty-seventh renewal of a series in which Yale has won 32 times and Harvard 18 since the inaugural in 1875.

Harvard Won in '37

One-touchdown victor a year ago, Harvard is favored to retain its Big Three championship because Dick Harlow's crimson-shirted cohorts finally have shown they are able to carry out the complex assignments essential to the success of the system he teaches. More than that, they have continued to show an aptitude and liking for the blocking and tackling fundamentals which were a glaring Harvard weakness until Harlow took charge and which have been one of Yale's notable faults this season.

Yale's coaches have been devising defenses to stop Harvard ever since the Crimson's 13-6 triumph in 1937. Yale's offensive probably will bank heavily on the passes of Sophomore Ray Anderson and Gil Humphrey. Meanwhile Harvard, its defense none too rockbound in earlier games, can be exepcted to run off its customery spinners, fake spinners and reverses that make the football look like the pea in a shell game.

The Harvard-Yale rivalry is the oldest to be renewed on Saturday. But Lafayette and Lehigh, of the middle three, have been more active. Though they didn't get started until 1884, this will be their seventy-second meeting, for they played two and three times a year in the early stages of the feud.

Midwest Tilts

The Midwest presents new episodes in five series dating back to the horse and buggy era. Wisconsin and Minnesota, battling for the Big Ten championship, will be staging the forty-seventh instalment of a gridiron thriller begun in 1891, the same year Purdue and Indiana put on their first scrap. Notre Dame and Northwestern will take up a rivalry started in 1889, Chicago and Illinois will renew a series inaugurated only three years later, and Michigan will be out to score on Ohio State for the first time in five years in a rivalry that saw the Buckeyes able to get only two ties from 1897 until 1919.

California, neck-and-neck with Southern California in the Pacific Coast Conference race, will meet Stanford for the forty-fifth time in a series that, from 1906 to 1914, was contested at Rugby instead of American football. Pittsburgh's forty-eighth duel with Penn State hardly looms like a throwback to their early days, when Pitt got only four points in the first six games; Georgia Tech will try for its eleventh triumph in 15 clashes with Florida, and Columbia and Syracuse, rivals since 1901, will meet for the eighteenth time.

Even Army and Princeton, though they haven't played each other in 30 years, will be reviving an old-timer. The Tigers and Cadets first got together in 1893 and played eight times, Princeton winning six and tying two.

Harvard Swim Star Drowns In School Pool

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 17 (U.P.).—A Harvard University graduate student died tonight in the college swimming pool while the varsity swimming coach and more than a score of students looked on.

Gustave Natapoff, of 1200 Simpson avenue, New York City, a Columbia University graduate, was believed to have suffered a heart attack while swimming under water.

Bystanders said Natapoff dived and swam 25 yards under water to the other end of the pool. He turned and began to swim back, still under water, but suddenly sank to the floor of the pool.

Wisconsin's Big Ten Title Hopes Rest With Minnesota

Nine Possible Finishes to Race Badgers Haven't Figured Since 1912 Michigan Meets Ohio State Eleven

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—The wildest big ten football race in years will end Saturday—with Wisconsin's title-starved Badgers "in at the kill."

Not since 1912 have the Badgers won or tied for a Western Conference gridiron crown. Saturday they will oppose Minnesota's Gophers in the crucial game of the title battle—one which may give them the undisputed championship, a tie for it or another year in the also-ran class.

There are nine possible finishes to a season in which no eleven has escaped a conference defeat, ranging from the outright titles which Wisconsin, Minnesota and Ohio State conceivably can win to a quadruple tie for the flag. In addition to Wisconsin and Minnesota, each with records of three wins and one defeat, and Ohio State, Michigan and Purdue still are in the running for a share of the crown.

The Badger-Gopher battle, to be played at Madison, Wis., before a capacity throng of 37,000, shapes up as a toss-up. Wisconsin, after early season losses to Pittsburgh and Purdue, came along fast to whip Indiana, Northwestern and University of California at Los Angeles. With the return to service of Lineman Lynn Hovland, the Badgers will be at top strength.

Minnesota, losers of two games in seven starts, may bounce back strong after bowing to Notre Dame last Saturday. Coach Bennie Bierman intends to throw a large number of reserves into the game.

Michigan's renaissance under Fritz Crisler would reach the heights by a victory over Ohio State, but the Buckeyes showed power in downing Illinois and the game should be a close duel. Both teams have heavy, strong lines and numerous hard-running backs. Michigan's conference record is two won, one lost and one tie, with Ohio State having won three, lost one and tied one.

Purdue, which has won twice and lost and tied single games, battles Indiana for the old oaken bucket at Lafayette, Ind. Chicago and Illinois meet at Stagg Field, while Northwestern and Iowa wind up their schedules, respectively, against Notre Dame and Nebraska.

BADGERS ARE NERVOUS

Madison, Wis., Nov. 17 (AP).—High nervous tension swept over the Wisconsin football squad today as the Badgers tapered off for Saturday's game with Minnesota—a game which has a spice of a possible conference championship added to one of the most famous of Midwestern rivalries.

At the ends, where most of the player juggling has taken place this season, Stuhldreher today used Bob Weigandt, a senior who starred in last year's Minnesota-Wisconsin game, and Ralph Moeller, junior veteran. No contact work was included in the workout.

NEBRASKA TAPERS OFF

Coach Murray's play was completed before the squad was put through a short scrimmage session which stressed passing, designed to stop North Carolina here Thursday.

NORTHWESTERN PASSES

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 17 (AP).—Northwestern devoted its football workout to another long forward passing drill today, polishing both offensive and defensive departments for the season's finale Saturday against Notre Dame. Coach Lynn Waldorf was perturbed by the failure of three cripples to respond to treatment. Tackle Bob Voigts and Center John Haman were not in uniform. Halfback Jack Ryan reported for the first time this week, but retired after firing a few passes. All have leg injuries.

DUKE ALMOST READY

MICHIGAN IS SET

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 17 (AP).—A determined Michigan football team, hoping to avenge in part four successive defeats by Ohio State, concluded preparations today for its game at Columbus Saturday.

ILLINI IMPRESSIVE

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 17 (AP).—Stirred by reports—promptly denied—that Coach Bob Zuppke planned to resign at the end of the football season, the Illinois varsity squad slashed through an impressive final drill for Saturday's closing game at Chicago.

The Illini displayed sharp improvement on defense against forward passes, and appeared ready to give Zuppke a vote of confidence by defeating the Maroons.

CHICAGO TRIES PASSES

Chicago, Nov. 17 (AP).—The University of Chicago's Maroons turned from defensive maneuvers to fill the air with forward passes today as they worked for the Illinois game here Saturday. Guess we've been so happy because we get along together so well. Even when it comes to cigars we've both agreed. Ralph enjoys his cigars—and so do I, because they go with kisses, too.

Ralph says:
Sure we're happy. Like Susann says, it's because we agree on so many things. She compliments me on my choice of an exceptionally mild cigar. But what she doesn't know is that they're not only mild, but the best tasting cigar I've ever smoked!

Smoke Over Pittsburgh

New York, Nov. 17.—The other day the University of Pittsburgh let it be known that a group of freshmen football players had been mildly shocked to learn that they actually would have to pay the $300 tuition for which they had signed promissory notes. The implication was that Pittsburgh had no idea of tearing up these notes, tossing them away and letting the boys ride through free of charge. No, sir, they belonged to the Purity League and they didn't care who knew it.

VIDMER.

But there is a significance attached to the fact that the item was so widely publicized; in fact, a significance that it was mentioned at all, except to the football players involved. The significance is that Pittsburgh wants the football world to know that it is cleaning up any athletic irregularities which may have existed in the past.

And the reason it wants the football world to know of the sweeping reform that is being instituted is so that it can get games now closed to the Panthers. Some of the teams they are most anxious to play simply shake their heads when approached about a future meeting and smile, "nothing doing. You're too good. We don't play your way."

Growth of the Violet

New York University is a very fitting example of the problems that beset any college that becomes aware of the importance of football prominence. Turning back the calendar to the season of 1925 we find N. Y. U. an insignificant factor as far as the football scene was concerned. It was just a little team, unpublicized, unheralded, unimportant except to its own student body.

That year—the season of 1925—the Violet, not yet violent, beat such teams as Niagara, Union, Connecticut Aggies, C. C. N. Y., Middlebury and Trinity. In fact those were the only teams it did beat. However, it played a 6-6 tie with Columbia, which was a long way from big time football itself, and lost to Fordham and Rutgers.

It wasn't an imposing schedule, but the student body felt it was a rather successful season. However, the general public didn't pay much attention to it one way or the other. It had bigger and better teams to follow.

But that fall Chick Meehan, a smart football coach and a master showman, had been brought down from Syracuse to take charge of N. Y. U.'s football fortunes. In short to build a team that would achieve national recognition. To do that it had to play and beat some of the better known aggregations.

This it began to do immediately. In fact the very next year it played and defeated Tulane, Rutgers, Fordham, Carnegie Tech and lost only to Nebraska.

Before 1930 N. Y. U. was recognized as one of the country's really strong football teams. It had come swiftly into prominence, striking before its opponents were able to set themselves, and one purpose had been accomplished. It had put N. Y. U. on the football map.

But there was another problem. It had to get a schedule, and the teams which it sought shook their heads and smiled and said, "Nothing doing. You're too good. We don't play football your way."

Sweeping Reforms

So there came a reaction, and the same people who had sought football prominence for N. Y. U. and attained it, turned their thoughts to gaining the respect of the football world so they could play with the nice crowd. Sweeping reforms were demanded. No more athletic scholarships. Higher scholastic standards. Jobs only for those who actually worked. More rigid entrance requirements.

These measures were adopted in all sincerity, and N. Y. U. looked at ivy walls and said, "look, we're just as pure as you are. Now will you play with us?"

But the answer was a smiling negative. "You're not too good any more," the answer came. "And you may be in our social strata, but how do we know when you're going to revert to your former standards? How do we know you're not planning right now on manufacturing another machine for operation in, let's say 1940?"

It's all a part of the vicious circle with which teams have to contend that rise to greatness overnight. Under the present setup N. Y. U. isn't good enough to play the teams outside its social circle which will attract attention, and incidentally a crowd. And the teams it would like to play, such as Columbia, Yale, Princeton, Penn, Cornell still remember that N. Y. U. was once a bad boy and are skeptical.

And now Pittsburgh is casting its eyes toward its future schedules. There was a time when Pitt played the Army, but the Army wanted no more of the Panthers after a few meetings. Notre Dame was an annual game in the City of Smoke, but the South Benders decided they were through, too. Now the Western Conference has decided it can do without Pittsburgh in the future.

As a matter of fact, Pittsburgh probably never let down the bars any lower than a lot of others, but they obtained results so consistently close to perfection that everyone else wanted to know "what's going on here, anyway?"

As a result Pitt isn't faced with any problem of publicizing its football team, its prominence in the national scene and its attractiveness to the paying patrons. Pitt's problem is to publicize its purity, and so it isn't in the least surprising to hear something emerge from the smoke that hangs over the city which sounds very much like, "Look what a good boy am I!"

Beats Out Fogoso; Pays $6.70 Ticket

Mr. Grundy Shows Spill Marks Opener Jockeys Uninjured Double Pays $89.90

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 17.—Returning to the track where he once won a stake race, Indomitable performed in claiming company today and turned in a driving head victory over Fogoso. Two and a half lengths farther back came Mr. Grundy, third in the field of nine sprinting over the 6-furlong course. Racing in the red and gold of the Longchamps Farms and in charge of Jockey Maurice Peters, Indomitable brought his backers a payoff of $6.70.

The race served feature purposes on an ordinary card which drew a midweek crowd of 7,000. Indomitable stepped the route in a creditable 1:13 while carrying top weight of 119 pounds.

Double Pays $89.90

After striking a new high for Maryland with a $6,754.50 payoff yesterday, the daily double returned to normalcy today. In contrast to the single ticket sold of the record mutuel, 111 customers had the right combination of Jest Once and Principessa and received $89.90 for the usual deuce.

Two jockeys escaped serious injury in a spectacular spill that marked the first race. Approaching the half pole, Puzzle Dance, with Jockey Nick Wall up, stumbled and fell. Cleo C., with Apprentice D. Militello aboard, tripped over the struggling horse and also went down. Wall, considered the best "money" rider in the business, rolled over several times but aside from a shaking up, he was not hurt. Militello suffered some bruises. Both boys canceled their mounts for the remainder of the day.

Jest Once, second choice in the field, was the winner in the colors of Max Hirsch and trained by his daughter, Mary. Coming from far back, the filly won by a neck while the photo gave Counora, a field horse, second money over Dinamita, another "fielder." Jest Once paid $8.20.

Jockey Peters Also Spilled

H. P. Metcalf's Principessa captured honors in a photo finish from Setemup. Both horses were showing a startling form reversal. Two Aces was third with Bosonia fourth. Star Mint, well played, didn't run a quarter's worth. Principessa paid $19.70.

Another mishap marked the third race and again the rider escaped injury. Jockey Maurice Peters was thrown with Many Flags when his mount stumbled entering the stretch. The winner was Naseberry, an $8.50-shot, who turned back Romaunt by a neck. Chalmac, a field horse, was third in the 6-furlong sprint.

Gyral, owned by T. D. Buhl, won the fourth race the hard way. Off poorly, the Judge Hay gelding trailed his field along the backstretch but closed with a terrific rush that made him the winner by two lengths. Prowl was second and Gaurisankar third in the field of eight going a mile and a sixteenth. Gyral paid $12.50.

Whipping Home the Mounts in Frantic Finish Drive

With the packed field about 40 yards from the finish, jockeys resorted to their crops to bring their mounts to the front in the third race yesterday at Bowie. In lead is Naseberry (No. 3), C. Stevenson up, the winner. Second was Romaunt (No. 4), with A. Smedley up. Beside Romaunt runs Chalmac (with blinkers and letter C), third-place horse

Raleigh Pinmen Stop Leaders

Putting a stop to Kann's winning ways in the Department Store League last night at Recreation Alleys the Raleigh Haberdasher bowling team handed the pace-setters a 2-1 setback, despite Irwin Simon's 390 and Vic Riston's 354.

William Kingsolver's 374 featured Woodward & Lothrop, defending champions, 2-1 win over the Hecht Co. Bill Norwood rolled 354 for the losers.

Christmas Clubs for '39 Open Dec. 1

Sponsored by 20 Banks 1938 Savings 7 Million No Interest Paid

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Next year's Christmas Savings Clubs will be opened by 20 local banks December 1, and will be conducted according to practically the same rules as this year's, membership in which exceeded 81,000, with deposits totaling more than $7,000,000. Banks providing for these thrift organizations hold membership in the District of Columbia Bankers Association and the parent organization will again announce their formation through cooperative advertising.

Cessation of interest payment on these accounts which went into effect locally this year, has had little effect on the popularity of this means of saving, the 1938 membership totaling 81,053, a decrease of only 4,633 from the preceding year's. The subscription amount of $7,005,205, represents a decline of but $429,769. The average local payment this year will be approximately $80, which is the highest per capita average in the nation.

Frederick M. Babcock, assistant administrator, Federal Housing Administration, and Dr. W. H. Husband, director, Home Loan Bank Board, both of this city, have accepted places on the program of the Mortgage Lending Conference to be held at Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., December 6. In addition to Mr. Babcock and Dr. Husband, the principal speakers for the conference will be Morton Bodfish, Chicago, executive vice president of the United States Building and Loan League, and W. Ray Skirvin, Eagle Savings & Loan Association of Cincinnati.

Wells Honorary Chairman

Cotton Close Is Irregular

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Cotton moved unevenly today as covering held near months steady and liquidation promoted by possibility of smaller loans on future cotton crops depressed distant deliveries. The market closed 7 points net higher to 4 points lower. March advanced from 8.45 to 8.50 and closed at 8.49.

Opening prices were 3 points lower to 1 point higher in small mixed trading. Trade and foreign buying absorbed liquidation and hedge selling. Prices advanced later as a result of persistent trade covering in near months. October, however, was subjected to pressure of commission house liquidation following reports Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in a Georgia speech, advised farmers to accept smaller loans on future cotton crops in return for larger benefit payments to be obtained through processing taxes.

Chemical Consumption Rises in October

New York, Nov. 17.—The index for chemical consumption, published by Chemical & Metallurgical Engineering, rose to 108 in October, as compared with 105.71 for September.

Latest figures covering industrial operations show that the war scare had some effect in slowing up the rate of acceleration of activities in September, but the trend has continued progressively upward from July forward with October making a better showing than any preceding month of the year.

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended November 12 as approximately 7,950,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1937, 8,957,000 tons; 1936, 10,247,000 tons.

Shippers Urged To Help Tide Rails Over

Plea of Milling Head Warns of U. S. Control Temporary Rates

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 17.—Warning Federal control or ownership may be necessary unless railroads get immediate relief, James F. Bell, chairman of General Mills, Inc., the Nation's largest flour milling enterprise, Minneapolis, urged shippers today to unite in an effort to restore the carriers to profitable operation.

In a speech before the National Industrial Traffic League, he said that getting the railroads back on their feet financially may mean paying temporarily higher shipping rates.

"I believe," he said, "that the long-time solution of the entire transportation problem is rather in lower than in higher rates. It very frequently happens, however, that in obtaining our objective we have to take preliminary steps that seem to point in the opposite direction."

Once the carriers are operating profitably again, he suggested, the industry could tackle the elimination of duplicate transportation facilities and other long-range problems.

Competition with motor and water carriers, he said, should be equalized, "either directly through granting higher rates to the railroads, or indirectly, by giving them the same subsidy advantages as their competitors."

He proposed that representatives of leading shipping groups get together and formulate a program to tide the carriers over their crisis and bring them back to profitable operation.

Cost of Living Dips in October

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—The cost of living of wage earners in the United States eased one-tenth of one per cent in October, compared with the preceding month, the National Industrial Conference Board reported today. The seasonal increase in coal prices was offset by declines in the cost of fod and clothing, the board said.

October living costs were put at 4.1 per cent under a year ago, 15.2 per cent below October 1929, but 19.7 per cent higher than the 1933 low.

Scrap Steel Rises To $15.75 Per Ton

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Dow Jones & Co. said today in a Pittsburgh dispatch sales of No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap were made at $15.75 a ton, an advance of 25 cents and a new high in the current recovery movement.

The base is now $15.25 to $15.75, which compares with $14.50 to $15 two weeks ago.

Hudson Show Sales Heavy

New York, Nov. 17.—Fred Turrill, New York zone manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co., stated today that retail sales of Hudson cars at the New York Automobile Show were running nearly 100 per cent ahead of sales during the show last year.

Stocks Turn Higher but Without Zest Trading Volume Drop Under Million Politics Continue to Exert Influence

New York, Nov. 17.—Trading dropped away to less than a million shares today and while the list averaged 0.40 point higher for the day, there was no spirit to the buying and irregularity was the chief characteristic. This was the first advance of the week and it had much the appearance of a technical rebound after three days of heavy selling. The street remains generally optimistic for the longer term but at the moment it is disturbed by conditions abroad, by the assurance of higher taxes as the national debt makes new highs almost daily and by the indications that the Administration intends to continue its drive against business.

Apparently the last election did not alter the opinions of those close to the President and while they still have the keys to the White House, the lot of the investor will be uncertain. Despite the gains made in Congress by the more conservative forces, those who have saved their money would feel more confident of the future if the Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats had a clear cut majority.

Politics rather than business indices have exerted the greater influence on prices this week. Representative surveys of trade conditions have been generally favorable but these have not been potent enough to take the market out of its current phase of irregularity.

An excuse for today's extreme dullness was seen in the scheduled signing of the trade agreements between this country, the United Kingdom and Canada. Fears that concessions might increase the competition of domestic manufacturers caused traders to keep to the sidelines until the new rates were announced, late in the afternoon. The agreements, running for three years, become effective the first of the new year and they cover products which make up a major share of the total trade between the three signatory powers. The optimistic view was expressed by the State Department that the new rates will stimulate mutually profitable expansion of trade in both directions.

Wheat Responds to Pact

While stocks were hesitant before the announcement of the signing, the wheat market was strong in a direct reflection of the agreement. Word apparently seeped around grain circles that domestic agricultural interests were to get their full share of the concessions made by the United Kingdom. This proved to be true.

Steels turned in the best showing with gains of 1 to 2 points in individual issues. Republic was the day's leader on transactions of 25,300 shares, the gain of ⅞ point being important to this moderate-priced stock. Steel common closed at 68⅛, up 1¾. Other members of the group were in fair demand. Pittsburgh reported a further advance in steel scrap prices, an unfailing barometer of activity in the industry.

Stores and motors showed some appreciation and coppers and rails were a trifle higher. Rail equipments and utilities were hesitant. Aircrafts were back in the limelight, Boeing, Sperry and North American Aviation being particularly strong and, considering the small volume for the list as a whole, active. Chrysler moved up 1⅜ in the automotive division with General Motors adding ⅝.

The October estimate of earnings of 92 Class 1 railroads was apparently about in line with Wall Street's ideas, as expressed by recent forecasts. Freight revenues of the carriers concerned were $237,355,480 for the month against $250,623,926 in the like 1937 period, a drop of 5.3 per cent. Passenger revenues were $26,788,699 against $30,412,727, off 11.9 per cent. Earnings of Illinois Central, announced overnight, were better than had been anticipated and put the company in the black for the first ten months. Southern Pacific's statement was also considered excellent.

Traction Bonds Strong

Listed bond trading was dull today, with the exception of still another upsurge in New York City traction securities. The advances in these bonds continued to reflect the election approval of the $315,000,000 unification bond issue. United States Treasury and best rated corporate bonds were dull, and speculative rail issues held around former levels. The foreign section showed more losses than gains. Turnover in all bonds was $5,700,000, against $8,230,000 the preceding day.

The buying of local tractions extended to all issues. Interborough bonds showed gains to 3 points, and B. M. T. 4½s were up 2¾ points. Manhattan Railway and Third Avenue bonds likewise improved. Among secondary rail issues gains and losses were evenly divided, with all movements small. Republic Steel convertible 4½s fell 17 points on the unexpected call of the small flotation for early redemption. Other stock privilege bonds were quiet, and holding company securities also proved listless.

United States Treasury bonds were idle both in counter trading and the formal market. There are still no signs of buying in such abligations, and the more significant moves were toward lower levels. Highly rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds attracted no interest, and in most instances small fractional losses were registered.

The foreign section was inactive, despite the excellent reception of the new $40,000,000 Canadian government loan. Best grade foreigns held to previous levels. The Italian and Japanese groups fluctuated idly, while German bonds were neglected. In the Latin-American default section the main trend was toward slightly lower figures.

Fund to Study Power Industry

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Twentieth Century Fund, a research organization founded and endowed by the late Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, today announced it was starting a study of the relation of Government to the electric light and power industry.

"The purpose of the study will be not the mere exposure of evils which have been so often and so effectively exposed during the past few years but the development of sound and constructive future policies," Evans Clark, executive director of the fund, said.

Clark announced J. Henry Scattergood, former public service commissioner of Pennsylvania, had agreed to act as chairman of the special committee making the study.

Other members are William L. Batt, Philadelphia, president of S. K. F. Industries and a director of United Gas Improvement Co.; James C. Bonbright, New York, professor of economics at Columbia University and trustee of the New York State Power Authority; Larue Brown, Boston, former United States Assistant Attorney General, counsel to municipalities in rate cases and to the Massachusetts public service commission; Murray D. Lincoln, Columbus, Ohio, executive secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation; Charles O. Rose, Cincinnati, Ohio, former city councilman and authority on city franchises, and Paul A. Schoellkopf, Niagara Falls, president of Niagara Falls Power Co.

Cash Circulation Drops $32,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The recent rise of money in circulation to almost unprecedented levels was reversed slightly in the week ended November 16. The Federal Reserve Board said last evening that money in banks and in the hands of the public declined $32,000,000 to a total of $6,732,000,000 in that week. For a few weeks before that the total was higher than at any time except for the two weeks after the national bank holiday in March 1933.

The circulation decrease, as well as Treasury spending and gold purchases, caused an increase of $130,000,000 to a total of $3,260,000,000 in the lendable excess reserves of banks during the same period. The increase brought idle funds within $20,000,000 of the year's peak.

In the bond market the issue dropped from $1,250 per 1,000 bond to $1,070 in light dealings. Yesterday the price had a sharp run-up from $1,170.

Federal Debt Sets New Record High

By the Associated Press.

Treasury figures disclosed yesterday that the public debt reached a new record high of $38,527,824,089 in the first four and half months of the fiscal year which began July 1. Increased by the spending program authorized by the last Congress, the debt was $1,363,083,774 higher than on July 1 and about $1,476,000,000 higher than a year ago. Spending, paced by WPA, was $3,337,796,811 in the period, compared with $2,846,449,626 last year. WPA shot its payments to relief workers up from $484,078,574 in the four and half months last year to $856,229,818 in the same period this year. The $1,000,000,000 WPA program, meanwhile, caused little drain on the Treasury because Federal disbursements lagged behind the initiation of projects. PWA has spent only $31,427,246 of its new funds so far in the fiscal year.

SEC to Study Met. Life Co.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities commission announced today that its monopoly division had begun a survey of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. has gross assets of over $4,000,000,000, and has been called the largest private financial institution in the world. The commission's monopoly division, co-operating with the temporary National Economic Committee, is analyzing the relation of insurance company investments to the capital market.

It was learned at the SEC that F. H. Ecker, chairman of the Metropolitan, had co-operated with the SEC analysts who will study certain records of the insurance company. The SEC monopoly study division is still building up a backlog of information on investment policies of insurance companies.

It was said that the group had received close co-operation from insurance companies on the preliminary questionnaire sent out to insurance executives several weeks ago. Commission analysts are now preparing data for a second questionnaire.

Cuba Asks Cut In Sugar Duty

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—An authoritative source in the sugar industry disclosed today that the Cuban government has initiated efforts toward negotiations for a downward revision of the United States sugar tariff. This source said the Cubans were gratified by the consideration already given their initial overtures and that they were fairly confident formal negotiations would be under way within a few weeks.

From a separate source in Wall Street came the report that Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of staff of the Cuban army who is making a courtesy call on the United States, was personally active in seeking the tariff revision in the hopes of increasing the economic stability of the island republic, whose chief industry is sugar production.

It was pointed out that, quite apart from treaty revision, President Roosevelt has the power to lower, by executive action, the present import duty on Cuban sugar which now stands at 90 cents per 100 pounds. Under the discretionary power the President holds, he can lower the tariff to 75 cents.

Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, the Cuban Ambassador who is here with Col. Batista, declined discussion of the reported diplomatic activities toward a new treaty.

He pointed out, however, that under present laws, Cuba must pay an excise tax of 53 cents per 100 pounds in addition to the 90-cent duty, making the total tariff on sugar importations from Cuba $1.43 per hundred.

Wheat Rises As Pact Drops Tariff Bar

Britain Removes Duty 6 Cents a Bushel Prices Gain 1⅛ Cents

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Advance unofficial announcements that Great Britain's 6-cent tariff discrimination against United States wheat had been removed gave Chicago wheat values 1⅛ cents hoist today.

Helping the market upward were persistent reports that a huge purchase of United States wheat 10,000,000 bushels by Great Britain was being negotiated. Estimates were also current that more than 750,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been bought today for export to Europe.

Among various traders, however, doubts remained that any big increase of United States wheat export business with England would take place. Reasons assigned were that wide differences in price between the two countries would be only in part readjusted by the British tariff removal, and that Argentina could be expected to meet any change in British-American market relationship.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ½ to 1 cent higher compared with yesterday's finish, December, 64¾@66¾; May, 66¾@66⅞. Corn, ⅛ to ½ up; December, 48⅛; May, 51⅜@51½. Oats unchanged to ⅛ advance, rye showing ⅛ bulge and provisions a climb of 5 to 7 cents.

Internationally Honored Was War Trade Official Heads Radiator Firm

New York, Nov. 17.—Clarence Mott Woolley, chairman of the board of American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation, today announced that he plans to retire after almost half a century as an officer of the firm. He celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday September 15.

It was expected he would be succeeded by Henry M. Reed, vice president of the company and president of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Co.

Woolley was born September 15, 1863, at Detroit, and was educated in the Detroit public schools. His achievements in the field of heating and ventilation since have won him two honorary degrees and decorations from three countries.

Was War Official

A pioneer in his field, he was vice Society, American Iron and Steel the War Trade Board and its liaison officer with the War Industries Board. For his services he was decorated with the Order of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor of France, the Order of the Crown of Italy and the Order of Leopold of Belgium. Later he was honored with degrees by Colgate and St. Lawrence universities.

He was one of the organizers of the American Radiator Co. in 1892 and became its president in 1902, and has been chairman of its board of directors since 1924. He also is a director of the Johns-Mansville Corporation, General Motors Corporation, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co., Gold Dust Corporation and Texas Sulphur Co. He was director of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York from 1922 through 1936.

Member of D. C. Club

Woolley is a member of American Academy of Political and Social Science, American Geographic Society, American Iron and Steel Institute, New York Zoological Society, Pan-American Society, Pilgrims of the United States, and the Metropolitan Club here. He is president of the trustees of the John B. Pierce Foundation.

Reed was born September 16, 1880, in Allegheny County, Pa., and received his education in the Allegheny County schools. He rose from enamel mixer in the Pittsburgh plant of Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Co. to its president.

Perjury Admitted In Marriage Plea

Claude J. Leeland, 38, of 1693 Thirty-fourth street northwest, yesterday pleaded guilty in Police Court to a charge of having perjured himself when he applied for a marriage license and denied a previous marriage.

Mrs. Anne Elizabeth Leeland, his wife, was sitting in the courtroom at the time of the plea. She obtained a warrant against Leeland when she read in Saturday papers that he had applied for a license.

Leeland's plea of guilty halted testimony. However, he was held under $1,000 bond by Judge Curran pending action of the grand jury.

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

Bob Burns Says—

At almost any party you go to out here, you'll hear the people discussing the servant problem. Their greatest trouble seems to be in getting servants who are loyal. I never bothered about that myself because I always figgered that pret' near anybody you get will be loyal to somebody.

The other day an actress called her cook in and says "Ella, I saw that grocery boy kiss you yesterday and I don't want that to happen again!" The cook says "Oh, don't blame that grocery boy—it ain't his fault! The ice man set him a bad example!"

'Authoritarian' Czech Regime Is Proclaimed

Coalition Formed To Forbid New Parties Parliament Meets

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Nov. 17.—A new national party, a coalition with a powerful bloc in parliament, issued a proclamation today declaring a state of "authoritarian democracy" in Czechoslovakia. Parliament reassembled after an interval of three months in which the nation has been dismembered.

The proclamation set forth the party would bear responsibility itself for Czechoslovakia's future policies and said new election laws would make the formation of any other new parties impossible.

Premier Jan Syrovy told the legislators "we are sincerely desirous to live in peace with all states, especially with our great neighbor, the German Reich."

He thanked the country for having "borne the blows of fate manfully in the ceding of Czechoslovak territory to Germany, Hungary and Poland, but warned "maybe we will have to face further trials, for our negotiations with neighbors no wise are ended and countless details still await settlement."

Nazis Absent

The legislators took cognizance of a draft law for Slovak autonomy, a document which is provisional but which was laid before Parliament now as a symbol of conciliation between Czechs and Slovaks.

The law will regulate Slovak language rights and will give the Slovaks greater weight in Parliament deliberations.

Establishment of a new Slovak diet, to be elected by direct and secret ballot, also was announced. The President of Czechoslovakia will appoint the Slovak autonomous government on the diet's recommendation.

Nation Changes Name

The future official title of this nation is to be the Czech-Slovak Republic, the hyphen being used to emphasize Slovak autonomy.

The new national party, called the state party for national unity, is an amalgamation of the former Agrarian, national unity and Fascist parties with the new industrial party. It was organized recently and formally announced today.

Rudolph Beran, former leader of the Agrarians, became its head.

May Lose Ruthenia

Budapest, Nov. 17 (AP).—Reports circulating tonight said negotiations were under way by which Hungary hoped to annex al of Ruthenia, autonomous eastern section of Czechoslovakia.
hoped to annex all of Ruthenia, would become Hungarian territory within a few weeks, and that Poland and Hungary would obtain the common frontier both want. Poland was said to be negotiating the matter with Germany.

Justice Reed to Get Yale Bowl For Winning 'Y' in Courts

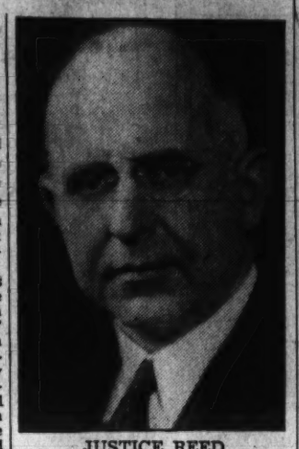
At Annual Party Barn to Be Scene In Distinguished Line



JUSTICE REED

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Montclair, N. J., Nov. 17.—Stanley Reed, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, will be the recipient of the Montclair Yale Bowl, annual award of the Yale Club of Montclair, at the eighteenth annual party, to be held in Nick Roberts' Old Yale Barn on December 8, it was revealed here today.

The honorary award, which is granted each year to the Yale alumnus "who has made his 'Y' in life" will be the eleventh "Bowl" bestowed at the barn party upon a Yale man for achievements attained after graduation. The trophy is a silver replica of a bowl designed and wrought by Paul Revere that is now on display in the Boston Museum. Mr. Justice Reed has accepted the award and announced his intention of attending the party for the presentation.

Announcement of the choice of Mr. Justice Reed was made here by Nicholas Roberts, chairman of the committee.

"In awarding the Yale Bowl," Mr. Roberts stated, "our formula provides that the recipient shall have made his 'Y' in life, that is that he shall have risen by his own efforts to the top of his own line of endeavor. We have chosen Mr. Justice Stanley Reed for the award this year for his distinguished record as a lawyer and a public servant. Beginning life in a small Kentucky town, he has risen by his own efforts and the brilliance of his intellect to the highest judicial office that our Republic offers to his profession."

Justice Reed was born in Mason County, Kentucky, in 1884. He was graduated from Yale with the class of 1906, receiving an A. B. degree. His legal studies were carried on at the University of Virginia, Columbia, and the University of Paris.

After his admission to the Kentucky Bar in 1910, he went to the State legislature where he served from 1912 to 1916. His first official entrance into the service of his country was as a first lieutenant in the Army during the World War.

Under President Hoover he served as general counsel for the Federal Farm Board. He left this office to become general counsel for the Reconstruction Finance Corp. and served in this capacity until March 23, 1935, when he was made Solicitor General of the United States. While holding this appointment he presented the Government's side in more important cases than any Solicitor General in history.

He was appointed Associate Justice on January 31, 1938, replacing Associate Justice Sutherland, and is the second youngest member of that bench. Justice Reed was one of the relatively few men to be appointed to the Supreme Court who had never served as a judge.

The Montclair Yale Bowl award has previously been made to the late Gen. W. W. Atterbury, '86; Maj.-Gen. Preston Brown, '92; John Q. Tilson, '91; Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, '21; Dr. Harry Cushing, '85; Eugene Meyer, '95; Wilbur L. Cross, '85; Thomas D. Thacher, '04; Frederick E. Williamson, '98, and Henry Luce, '20.

The barn party, which has been held each year since 1921, will also serve as a farewell to the football players of the senior class, led by Bill Platt, captain of this year's team. The captain-elect, and the coaching staff, led by Head Coach Ducky Pond, will be among the guests of honor. Malcolm Farmer, Yale director of athletics, will be the official representative of the University.

Yale graduates from all sections of the country, leaders of business, industry and the professions, will attend the barn party and witness the presentation of the Bowl.

Old-Age Benefits Reach New High

Old-age insurance payments in October reached the highest monthly average since the system became effective on January 1, 1937, the Social Security Board announced yesterday.

Claims certified for payment, which totaled 17,515 in October, averaged $61.81 for the Nation. Average payments to old people in the District, however, averaged $71.59. A total of $1,082,621.42 was paid out last month.

Old-age claims are paid to wage earners who have reached the age of 65, or to heirs of those who have died. The payments are in lump sums equal to 3½ per cent of total taxable wages paid the wage earner. Monthly payments to retired workers are scheduled to start in 1942, under the social security act.

Ask Doctor About This Ideal Way TO LOSE FAT

READ EVERY WORD!

Make up your mind now that you'll lose some of that ugly fat and really enjoy life.

No one can blame you if you don't want to take harmful drugs, go on starvation diets and do backbreaking exercises. No sane woman would! And for sensible women like yourself who really want to reduce yet don't expect miracles overnight—who are willing to faithfully follow a most simple, inexpensive and pleasant 28 day plan (women considerably overweight naturally require longer periods), we suggest this easy plan.

First of all go light on fatty foods and sweets. Eat plentifully of lean meats, fresh fruits and vegetables. And for proper functioning be sure to take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in hot water every morning. And let's get this straight right now about Kruschen—

It is not harmful. It is NOT just one salt as some people may ignorantly believe. Look on the box! You'll see it is a blend of 6 active mineral salts, which when dissolved in water is similar to the famous medicinal waters of European Spas where wealthy fat people have gone for years.

A jar of Kruschen costs but a few cents and makes 5 gallons of marvelous mineral health water. Get a jar RIGHT AWAY! At druggists everywhere.

S.S.S. Tonic brings you new strength and vitality by restoring your blood to a healthy state, and its benefits are cumulative and enduring in the absence of an organic trouble.

Further, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite . . . foods taste better . . . natural digestive juices are stimulated, and finally, the food you eat is of more value . . . a very important step back to health.

Buy and use with complete confidence, and we believe you, like thousands of others, will be enthusiastic in your praise of S.S.S. Tonic for its part in making "you feel like yourself again."
